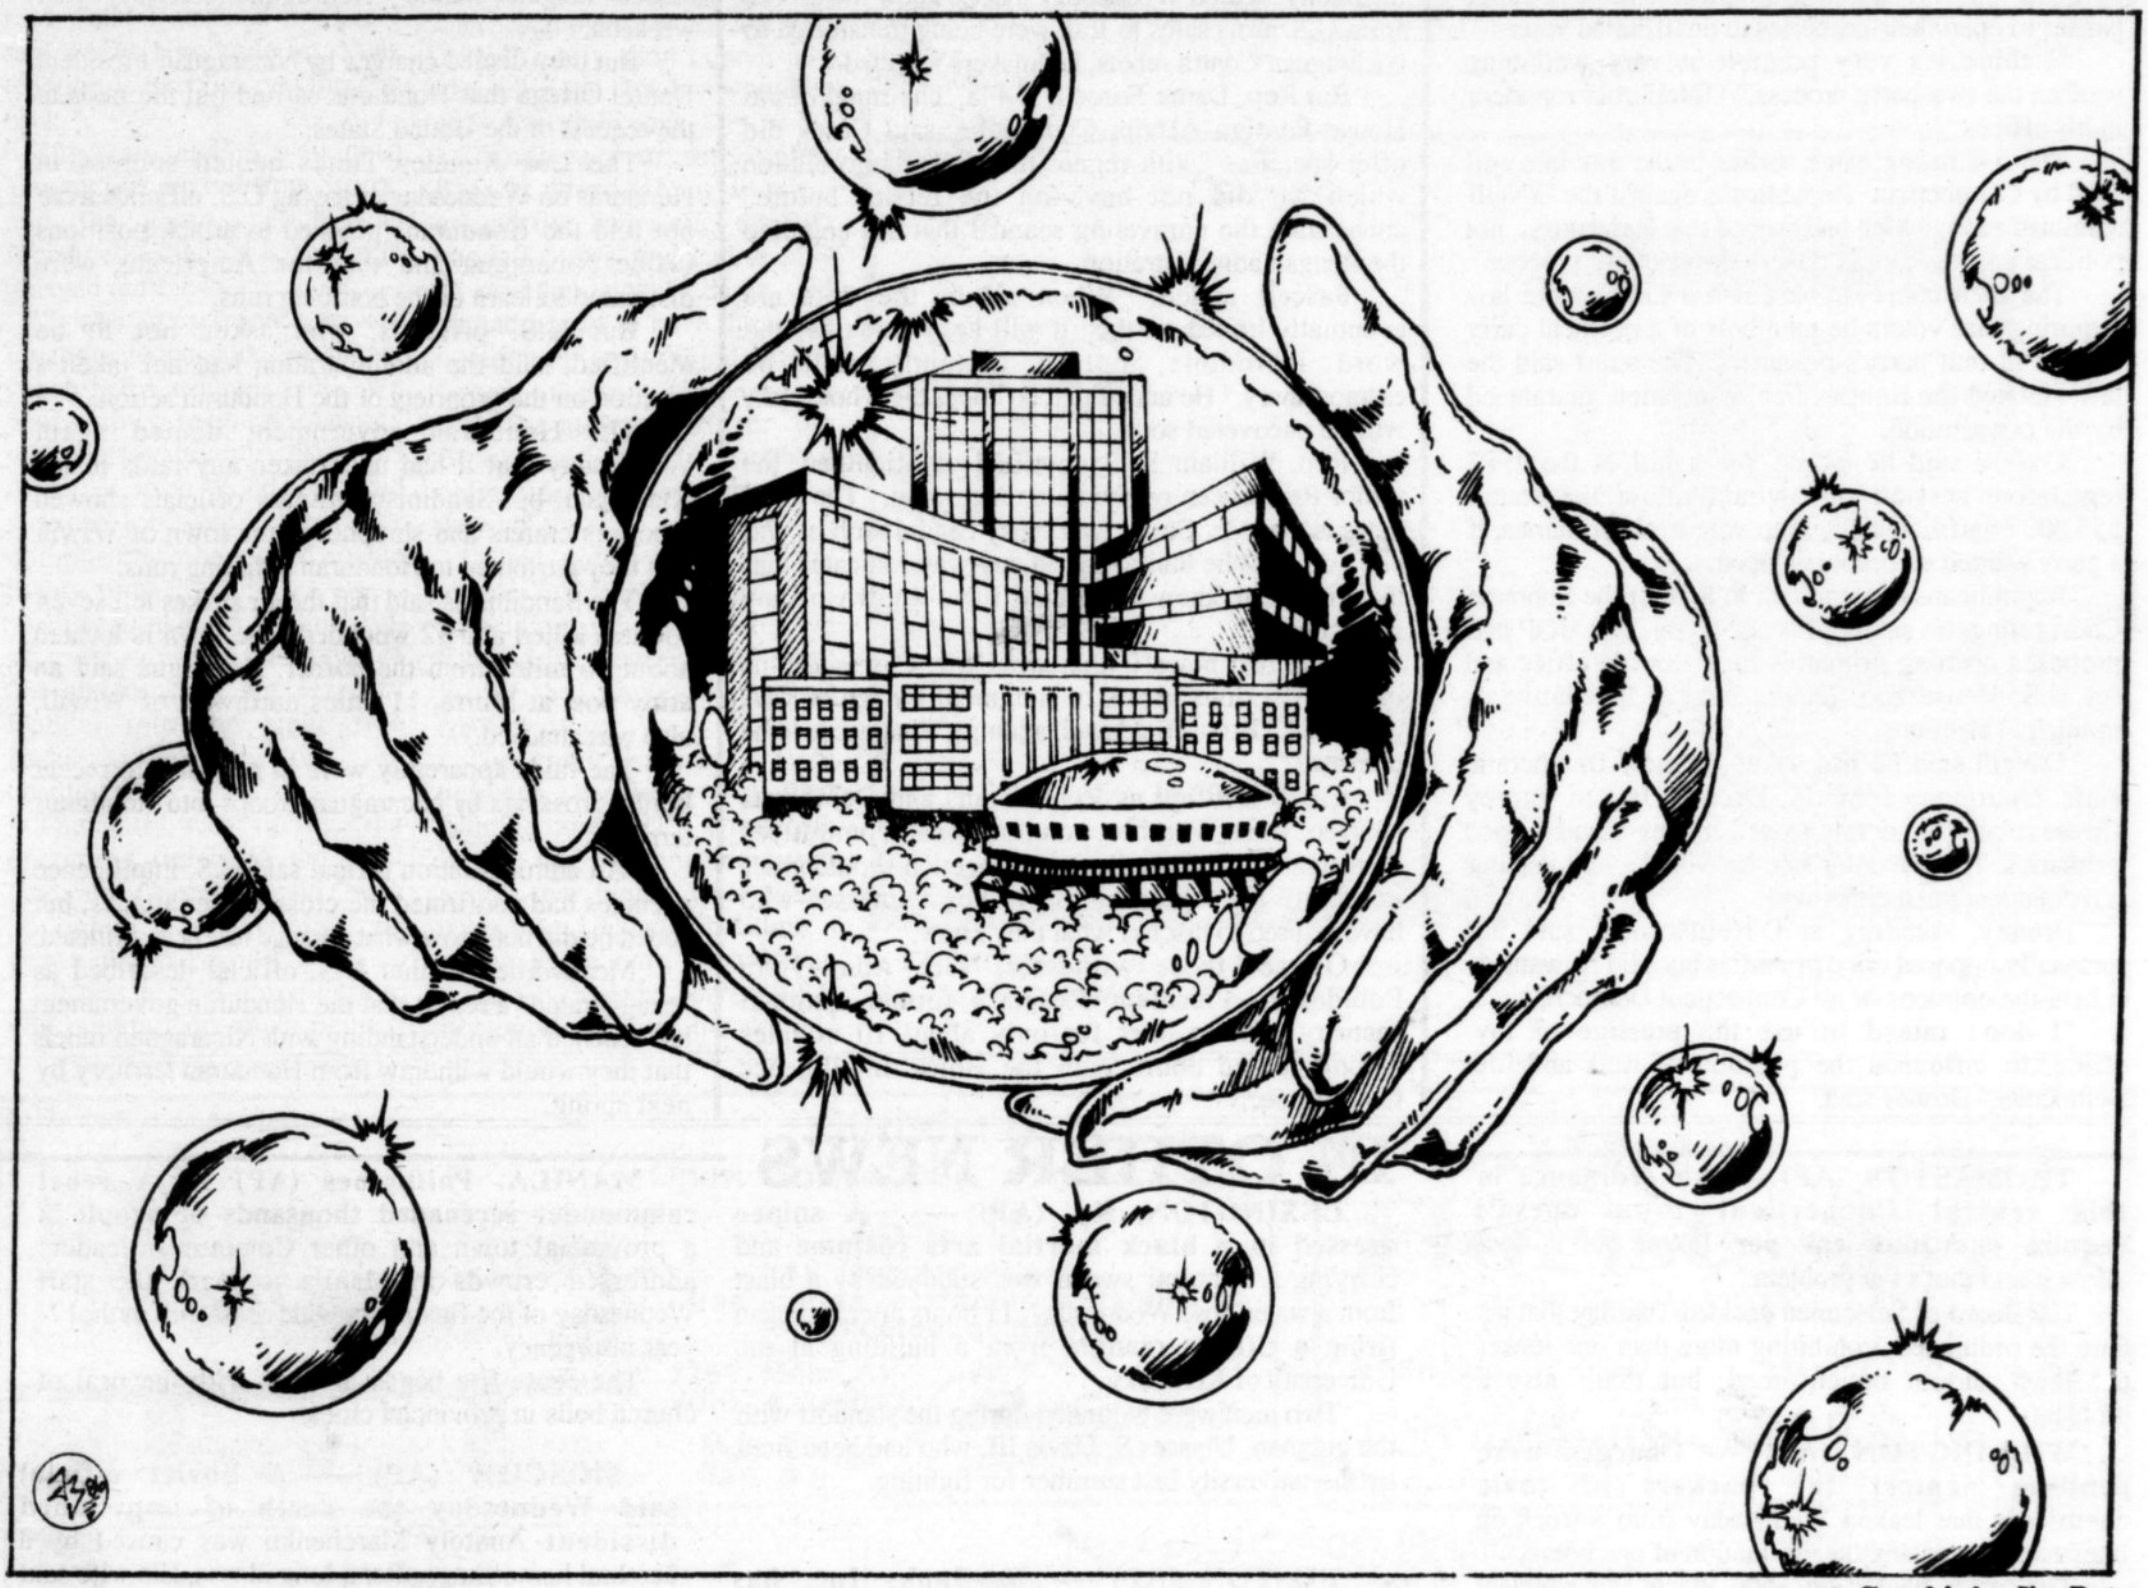
UConn looks into its future



Graphic by Jim Bates

By Paul Parker
Daily Campus Staff

In 1881 the Storrs brothers began an agricultural school on the farmland of Eastern Connecticut and set in motion a chain of unending change.

A little more than 100 years later, more than 23,000 people attend the university's 17 schools and colleges on nine campuses across the state.

From that vantage point, The Daily Campus takes a look forward at where UConn is going.

Before taking a look forward, it is appropriate to take a look back. UConn of 1966, with less than 8,000 students and Homer Babbidge as it president, was a place of dress codes and limited visiting hours between the sexes. The Daily Campus points out some of the highlights of UConn of the middle '60s on page four.

From there, the look goes forward to the 21st century and a $330 million plan of reconstruction. To be presented to the Board of Trustees early next semester, the plan calls for the construction of 18 new buildings and the re-arrangement of campus to form two "pedestrian superblocks" covering roughly the area from South Campus to North Eagleville Road—Hillside Road to Route 195. A story about the plan for the "dream campus" is on page four.

Along with a short-term university building boom, which includes plans for a new sports center, additions to one of the engineering buildings and to the Benton Art Museum and the Connecticut Technology Park, all scheduled to be completed before the turn of the century, building in the surrounding community has flourished as well. On page five is a look at construction of condominiums, housing projects and commercial ventures in the Storrs area.

As northeast Connecticut anticipates the ConnTech Park and other developments at UConn, as building booms in the area, real estate values skyrocket. On page 14 is a view of where the market is going, as real estate values more than double in some instances and plans go forward for a highway into the area to bring new workers, residents and goods to feed the growing economy.

On campus, the flagship of all construction in the area—ConnTech Park—is in drydock and ready for its shakedown cruise. Officials overseeing the project are looking forward to the beginning of construction in the spring. The history and future of the park, which is expected to bring jobs and people to the area and boost UConn and the state into the top ranks of the research and development world, is plotted and explained on page 33.

Building projects in the area will have "major consequences" on the community, according to Mansfield Town Manager Martin Berliner.

UConn's first century was that of a small, rural campus set in pasture land. If plans go forward, UConn's second century will find cows grazing among computer factories and large-scale plasma research laboratories.

Court opens primaries to unaffiliated voters

HARTFORD (AP) — Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill said Wednesday he was surprised by a Supreme Court ruling affirming the right of political parties to open their primaries to unaffiliated voters.

"I think it's very possible it very well may weaken the two-party process," O'Neill told reporters in his office.

The 5-4 ruling came earlier in the day in a suit filed by Connecticut Republicans against the O'Neill administration, which had argued that legislatures, not political parties, should govern the electoral process.

The high court struck down a Connecticut law requiring that voters be members of a political party to vote in that party's primaries. The court said the law violated the right to free association guaranteed by the constitution.

O'Neill said he would file a bill in the 1987 legislative session that would allow the state's 556,000 unaffiliated voters to vote in all primaries, if a party wanted its primaries open.

Republicans contend that in light of the Supreme Court ruling, no such bill is necessary. The GOP had proposed opening primaries for statewide office and for U.S. House and Senate, but not legislative or municipal elections.

O'Neill said he had asked the new Democratic state chairman, John F. Droney Jr., to survey Connecticut Democrats to see if they wanted open primaries. The governor said he would avoid making a recommendation either way.

Droney, standing at O'Neill's side, said he personally opposed open primaries but said he wanted to hear the opinions of all Connecticut Democrats.

"I don't intend to use the prestige of my office...to influence the position of rank-and-file Democrats," Droney said.

CIA director testifies before committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director William Casey, in five hours of secret, sworn congressional testimony, denied Wednesday that he knew the profits from U.S. arms sales to Iran were being transferred to Nicaraguan Contra rebels, lawmakers reported.

But Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said Casey did offer specifics "with regard to a lot of information which we did not have on the record before" concerning the unraveling scandal that has engulfed the Reagan administration.

Fascell added, "When all of the dots are eventually linked on this, it will be, I won't use the word incredible, but it certainly will be extraordinary." He added that he hopes the whole story will be uncovered soon.

Rep. William S. Broomfield of Michigan, the senior Republican on the committee, said, "The good news is that Mr. Casey was pretty candid with us and none of what he had to say in any way indicates that the president knew or should have known of any wrongdoing."

"The bad news is that what Mr. Casey told us indicates serious errors of judgment by senior CIA personnel," Broomfield said, adding, "That needs to be corrected."

Casey testified as Republicans and Democrats sparred over whether congressional committees investigating the Iran-Contra connection should grant immunity from prosecution to key witnesses who have refused to discuss what they know.

One of those witnesses, Vice Adm. John Poindexter, President Reagan's former national security adviser, met for only about 10 minutes behind closed doors with the House Intelligence Committee.

U.S. officials confirm Honduran air strikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials confirmed Wednesday that Honduran jets struck targets inside Nicaraguan territory last weekend.

But they denied charges by Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega that Honduras carried out the raids at the request of the United States.

The Los Angeles Times quoted sources in Honduras on Wednesday as saying U.S. officials were not told the Hondurans planned to attack positions inside Nicaragua and that the Americans were distressed to learn of the bombing runs.

But U.S. officials, who asked not to be identified, said the administration had not taken a position on the propriety of the Honduran action.

The Honduran government denied again Wednesday that it had undertaken any raids inside Nicaragua, but Sandinista military officials showed reporters craters and shrapnel in the town of Wiwili that they attributed to Honduran bombing runs.

The Sandinistas said that the air strikes left seven soldiers killed and 12 wounded. The town is located about 16 miles from the border. Nicaragua said an army post at Murra, 11 miles northwest of Wiwili, also was attacked.

The raids apparently were in response to recent border crossings by Nicaraguan troops into Honduran territory.

An administration offical said U.S. intelligence agencies had confirmed the cross-border attacks, but added he did not know what damage had been inflicted.

Meanwhile, another U.S. official described as "exaggerated" a report that the Honduran government has reached an understanding with Nicaraguan rebels that they would withdraw from Honduran territory by next spring.

Basketball team runs into trouble on the road

By Joe Erwin
Daily Campus Staff

Even though the basketball team lost the game 80-71 to Boston University Tuesday, the team and coaches were fortunate not to lose a whole lot more.

The team bus hit a disabled car on the Massachusetts Turnpike at about 5:25 p.m., but the only injury was a slighly strained neck to coach Jim Calhoun.

"I was up in front," Calhoun said, "and I strained it when I saw we were going to hit. Your reaction is to try to pull the bus back."

The team had to wait until another bus arrived from Storrs, and the game, which was scheduled to start at 8 p.m., was delayed until 9:45.

"It was an experience driving up there to be sure," assistant coach Bill Cardarelli said. "We were pretty fortunate nobody was [seriously] hurt. The bus driver [Watson Woodworth] did a great job. We were lucky nothing more happened to the bus — or us."

Kelly Drake, 19, of Suffield, swerved to miss a car ahead of her and crashed her Mercury Bobcat into the right side barrier, knocking out the headlights.

The car was facing the oncoming traffic in the right lane, and Cardarelli said "with no lights on or anything, we were right on top of it."

"It was a head-on collission, you couldn't do much better," Tim Tolokan, assistant dirctor of athletics for communication who was on the bus, said.

Drake had gotten out of her car before the bus hit it. If she hadn't, she would likely have been killed.

"There was nothing left of the car," Calhoun said.

After the bus hit the car, the bus swerved across two lanes of the highway and went onto the grass median. The team stayed inside until about two hours later when the other bus arrived.

"We really didn't have any idea when the next bus would be out," Cardarelli said.

UConn got to the Walter Brown Arena about 9 p.m., around five hours after the first bus left Storrs, and had to play 45 minutes later. Calhoun said he had hoped to have the game postponed and called Steve Green, Boston University's assistant athletic director, but Green said UConn had an obligation to play whenever they got there.

"They didn't allow us any choice," Calhoun said. "It's something we wouldn't have handled the same way. I don't think the game was well conducted."

The game featured a fight between Husky guard Phil Gamble and BU's Drederick Irving and a controversy in which two points were taken away from UConn at halftime.

The scoreboard at halftime originally had the score 39-31, Boston University, but the BU score—keeper, a 19-year-old student, said her statistics had the Huskies only scoring 29 points. The points were taken down, put back up, and taken down again.

"She shouldn't have been there," Calhoun said of the score—keeper, who left in tears before the second half started.

Television replays showed UConn scored 31 points in the half.

"If it had been a two-point game we would have been upset," senior center Gerry Besselink said.

In the game, Cliff Robinson led the Huskies with 26 points and Jeff King added 18, but UConn lost the game at the free-throw line, shooting 26-for-46.

The Huskies weren't blaming the loss on the accident, but it had to have affected the team.

"I think the accident shook up the kids and myself," Calhoun said. "I don't think there's any question [it had an effect]."

Besselink said the delay may have hurt the Terriers as well.

"Sitting around the bus for two hours isn't the best thing to do," Besselink said, "but they were also sitting around for two hours waiting for us.

"We didn't go after them. We were flat."

There were reasons to be flat. The front right side of the bus was caved in and the players had to kick out the door. In addition, Besselink said at first nobody knew if there was anybody in the car.

"It was a scary, scary situation for a while," Tolokan said.

LBJ and Vietnam: UConn twenty years ago

By Sonja Molder
Daily Campus Staff

"Children, students, and faculty joined together in the Student Union lobby for the annual tree trimming and carol sing Friday afternoon. There was a special appearance by a man in a red suit."

That story appeared on the first page of the Connecticut Daily Campus Monday, December 13,1966.

The President of the United States was Lyndon B. Johnson.

American activity increases in Vietnam, an article said. The United States asked United Nations Secretary Gen. U Thant to try again for a truce in Vietnam, it continued.

Communists reported first U.S. bombing of Hanoi proper while the United States denied charges of bombing civilian targets in Hanoi, another article read.

Teamsters President James Hoffa was convicted, and a prison sentence was ratified by the Supreme Court this month.

Animator-cartooon pioneer Walt Disney died at age 65.

UConn has changed a great deal since then. Many of today's students did not know the alphabet at that point in their lives let alone their integrals.

Twenty years ago Homer D. Babbidge was president of UConn, and the campus housed 7,827 students.

The UConn mascot was Jonathan IV.

In the music scene, the Supremes' "You Can't Hurry Love" topped the Huskies Hit List.

The Harlem Globetrotters appeared at the UConn field house that December and admission for students was only a $1.50.

The 1966 version of the UConn Handbook included a chart of clothes acceptable to wear at the university. Bermuda shorts were a taboo except in a student's dormitory on Sunday.

The Official Women's Student Government Standards listed dress codes, male visitation hours, as well as phone call limitations. Many students today would relish that five—minute maximum rule when they receive their phone bill each month.

Students welcomed the new year 1967 in their dormitories as opposed to the month—long vacation students enjoy now.

Christmas break lasted from December 17 to January 2 that year, and all students were expected back in the classroom the day after New Year's. Then when could the UConn ski club go to Stowe?

Dormitory life has since undergone drastic reforms. McMahon was a new dormitory, and Buckley Hall and Hilltop did not even exist.

Controversy arose concerning male visiting hours in female dorms. The rules were that males were allowed in common areas of female dormitories during certain hours but could not pass the first floor.

Later that year, the rule was modified to allow males in the rooms only on Sunday afternoon—a very ironic comparison to the coed floors today.

What will UConn be like in the year 2006? The new sports center and the projected dream campus will be old news.

Our Huskie mascot Jonathan VIII will be replaced by who—knows—what numbered Jonathan. Contemporary high-rises and coed rooms may be a common sight to the UConn students of tomorrow. We'll have to wait and see.

Master plan to be presented in 1987

By Kathleen Brett
Daily Campus Staff

A $330 million Master Facilities Plan will be presented to the UConn Board of Trustees in February of1987. This plan is the result of the findings in a one—year study conducted by a team of physical planners and academic consultants, said Harry Hartley, vice president of finance and administration.

Roger Vogler, administrator of physical plant at UConn said the study evaluated the spacial needs of UConn in four general areas: the classroom, laboratory, office and research laboratory, and the conclusion reached after the study was that UConn lacked office and research space.

The Master Facilities Plan proposes the construction of 18 new buildings, each roughly the size of Castleman Engineering Building, Vogler said. These buildings will be centrally located on campus, forming two pedestrian "superblocks," spanning from Hillside Road to Gilbert Road to Mansfield Road connected by Glenbrook Road. There will also be a triangular pedestrian block extending from Hillside Road to Gilbert Road connected by North Eagleville Road, he said.

Vogler said all vehicular traffic in this area will be eliminated, and both Fairfield Road and Auditorium Road will be redesigned as broad pedestrian walkways.

The hub of the campus will be located in front of the north steps of the Homer Babbidge library where a pedestrian plaza will also be built, he said. A pedestrian plaza is a gathering area for the students, he said.

Three new research buildings are also proposed in the plan, Vogler said. The new buildings will be located south of Torrey Life Sciences Building and form a quadrangle with it, he said. The quadrangle will be called Technology Square. Vogler said Technology Square will also be linked to the library via a large pedestrian walkway.

Vogler said parking proposals include building a parking garage where K Lot is presently located. K Lot is between the faculty parking lot at the Math Science Building and Farmer Brown's parking lot. Another proposal is a 700 car lot to be built behind McMahon Hall, he said.

Vogler said there is no mention in the proposal of building new dormitories. Any tentative hotel building plans are unrelated to the $330 million proposed expenditure, he said.

Students will not be financially responsible for any of the $330 million through tuition or any other university fees, Vogler said.

He said the money will be received only with the approval of the University capital budget by the state legislature. The University receives $15-16 million annually from the legislature, he said.

If the Master Facilities Plan is accepted, the plan will begin phasing in1988-89, and the renovation process will be gradual, spanning up to 20 years, Vogler said.

New buildings to have impact on Storrs community

By Bill Slocum
Daily Campus Staff

While some local officials, such as Town Planner Greg Padick, "do not feel Storrs will change in any dramatic fashion," a number of recent building projects are expected to have what Town Manager Marty Berliner calls "major consequences" on the community.

Connecticut Technological Research Park, the planned research/conference/ living facility, will be only one of several new complexes set up in Storrs. Also planned outside the UConn campus is Storrs Commons, a combination office and retail area on the site of the old College Theater, as well as Courtyard at Storrs, a 47-unit condominium already in operation between the Storrs Post Office and Hank's Hill Road.

In addition, according to Padick, "preliminary discussion" has begun regarding proposed "fraternity and sorority buildings between Hilltop [dormitory] and King's Hill road." Padick said that "ConnTech project spinoffs," such as business offices, may be built.

Berliner added that a proposed Route 6 has been in the works for a while and will offer Storrs greater access to Hartford. "It will also have a major impact on growth and development" in the community, "opening up the area to more people," he said.

While Berliner said he anticipates "a positive effect" from the many projects around Storrs, such as "more jobs and a better tax base," both he and Padick seemed concerned about possible problems resulting from this sudden boom. "There are always problems related to growth," Berliner said, "such as more cars and more people. We enjoy a way of life people here wouldn't want changed to a large degree." He said it was good that ConnTech will be built in stages. "It's a lot easier to deal with phased development," he said.

"Continued growth pressure will have to be reviewed"," Padick said. "We have the tools available to regulate growth so it will be acceptable to the community." Padick said "enviromental considerations" are also a concern, and are protected by local regulations.

Berliner attributed this recent growth to a number of factors. "The economy has been good for a number of years. Transportation [facilities] have improved. People are moving out of Hartford, and are attracted by such things as lower land prices."

Padick said that Courtyard at Storrs is "unique", being the first condominium project ever built "in this immediate area." Already having their initial 26 living facilities built, bought, and occupied after being operational only two months, the real-estate firm of R.C. White, which manages the property, expects the project's remaining 21 condominiums to be built and filled by next spring.

Attorney Samuel Schrager, who represents the Hartford-based firm, said the Courtyard at Storrs was "a success the day after we got zoning approval." He said only about five of the living areas, which have rates beginning at $100,000, remain unreserved. "We are not even quoting prices now," he said, adding that "people are begging me to sell them a unit."

In addition to serving a definite local interest for higher-priced housing, Schrager said the Courtyard is "the finest complex ever built in Storrs,"saying he felt it "adds real dimension and a lot of prestige" to the community. Buyers so far have included UConn professors, graduate students, staff workers, retirees, doctors, and lawyers.

"I've looked at that land myself for twelve to thirteen years," Schrager said. "The timing just seemed right."

Mike Taylor, attorney who represents the Storrs Commons facility, presently under contruction on Route 195 between the University Plaza and Store 24, said he feels "the town needs extra retail space." He said he expects the facility to be open by late spring or early summer, "depending on the weather", and adds there is "no question we'll be open for Fall

TWAS THE NIGHT BEFORE FINALS AND ALL THROUGH THE FLOOR NOT A CREATURE WAS STUDYING NOT EVEN ANITA. THE FROG WAS HUNG BY THE WINDOW WITH CARE IN HOPES THAT JAY SOON WOULD BE THERE. ALL OF US WERE SNUG IN OUR BEDS WHILE VISIONS OF VODKA SPINNED THROUGH KELLI'S HEAD. WENDY IN HER KERCHIEF AND JON IN HIS CAP, HAD JUST SETTLED DOWN FOR A QUICKIE, THEN A NAP. THEN OUT ON THE FLOOR THERE AROSE SUCH A CLATTER. TERESE SPRUNG FROM HER BED TO SEE WHAT WAS THE MATTER. AWAY TO THE WINDOW BETH DID FLY. WHILE ELAINE QUICKLY CREAMED "WHAT ARE YOU HIGH?" WHEN WHAT TO HER BLOODSHOT EYES DID APPEAR BUT THE BAKED BEAN AND SEVEN TINY REINDEER. WITH A LITTLE OLD DRIVER SO LIVELY AND QUICK, LAURA LOOKED UP FROM HER ASA SAYING IF MUST BE ST. NICK. WHILE WE WHISTLED AND SHOUTED FOR A TRIP TO THE PACKEY, SHE CALLED NOW OLIVIA, NOW APRIL, NOW LISA, NOW JACKIE, ON BETH, ON JEN, ON KELLY. AS SHE FINISHED A DRAG ON HER MARLBORO LIGHT SHE PUFFED. OUT THE WORDS "MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL AND TO ALL A GOOD NIGHT"!!!

To my FAVORITE hollogram. Are you for real? I hope so 'cause I like you too. Mr. Long Red Scarf.
P.S. Merry Christmas

Joanne, you old closet drinker! Merry Christmas! Good luck on your FINAL finals. I'll miss you next semester but meet you on the slopes in January. Love always, another old closet drinker, Nancy.

To my darn ROOMMATE — Guess who this is from? No, it's NOT the guy ON the calendar (he sends his best though). Well, I just want to wish you Happy Holidays and good luck on your exams, damit!! From your darnit roomie.

Ralph: The past year has been more than special. The rough times that could have ended us only made us stronger. Since that night last December we've shared some beautiful memories and I am looking forward to those ahead. Everytime I look into your eyes I fall in love all over again. You're my best friend. Against all ODDS - always, Adrienne Kristen and Denise, I can't wait until next semester. The "penthouse" will be rocking! Back together once again. Only one more semester, how sad? Lots of love, Laura.

Janet (aka OJ): CONGRATULATIONS! You are a really great friend; we're going to miss you! Come back and visit SOON! Best of luck, we know you'll be happy and successful. Lots of Love, Leslie & Rosemary.
P.S. Do we get free eye check-ups?

SGW — hey cutie! i wish you a very very merry Christmas and a WILD time back in E.G.! i hope Santa treats you & Bjorn well, 'cause i put in a few good words for you guys!! Don't just forget about me...i'll be thinking of ya...M from S---, CT.

Wolfie and The Wolfgang: I want to wish you all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Love, Slim.

Barry and Peter — I hope you know just how much having you guys around has meant to me. You've helped me through a lot of rough spots and I really appreciate that. I'm really going to miss you guys next semester. Remember — I'll always be here for you. Love, Sue.

SUE AND SUZANNE — the two worst roommates ever — Get psyched for Spring Break! We'll send you a postcard from Hawaii. Love, Madonna and Ramone.

Jennifer, This has been a great semester, even though it might be my last! You have become not only a best friend, but a sister too! Thanx. Have a Merry Christmas. Love, Madonna.

Kurt, You're so cute! The last couple weeks have been so special, let's not let it end. I might be needing a massage during break, so make sure you're home. Have a nice Christmas. Love, Judi

Stupid, You're incredible!! It must be that Polo! Thanx for being a friend and for the apple juice. I had so much fun!! Sorry you didn't get any sleep! Have a Merry Christmas and don't work too hard. Love, Obsession XOXO

Judi, It was fun sharing my short but sweet college experience with you. You've been a best friend for seven years. Let's keep up the friendship. I'll see you on some weekends. I'll miss you kid. Merry Christmas. Love, Mindy

Larry, Well, it's finally time to face the real world and I know you're going to KNOCK 'EM DEAD! You've been a very important part of my life at UConn and the memories I have I'll always cherish. Remember that whatever the future brings or wherever you may drift that you will ALWAYS be tucked away in a very special place in my heart.
Forever and Always, Liz

Guillermo,
Only two weeks 'til you get your bunny. Be patient! MERRY CHRISTMAS!! I Love You!
jeannie

To all of the acquaintances (friends, enemies, whatever...) of Ken. M. (Hicks 3rd):
This green personal is to wish you all a MERRY CHRISTMAS and HAPPY NEW YEAR! Another semester has gone by and along with it many fun times and great memories. I must start off by wishing my five daughters their best winter break ever: Kirsten, Karen, Kim, "K"arrie, and "K"uningham. BETS, have a Merry Christmas but I hope you realize you have another three semesters to get by my revenge. Just remember: I'm not nice! Happy Holidays to "Fresh", Stephanie, and Maureen. Lisa D. in Delta Zeta, we haven't seenmuch of each other this semester, but I hope that changes next semester. Enjoy your break and let's stay in contact. Cindy "Anatomy", the Red-Headed Goddess: I've known you for 2 1/2 years now, and now you're leaving me. I can't imagine what the next 1 1/2 years are going to be like without you. Ijust want to wish you Happy Holidays and good luck in your future endeavors, you can be sure that you will be missed! Finally, to my roommate, Andre, and the rest of the Hicks Hall Gang, enjoy your break and let's get psyched for the spring semester!
Sincerely, Ken M. (a.k.a The LEGEND)

and Kathy L.,
Have a GREAT Christmas! Good luck on exams. We're gonna miss you guys!

Fall 1986 Presentations of the Daily

Compiled by Paul Parker
Daily Campus Staff

People sometimes say silly things, and occasionally profound things, without trying. The Notable Quotable Awards are a salute to those people. Following are the noteworthy quotes heard by The Daily Campus this semester.

The Flunked Out Of Business School Award

"So successful it's going bankrupt."

Ronald Pape, manager of the student credit union, about the union

The Persuasive Presentation Award

"If I were a USG member, I would vote against."

Ronald Pape, manager of the student credit union, trying to convince student government members to vote in favor of credit union funding

The Home Sweet Home Award

"The carpet stinks and the furniture stinks because it's so old."

Brad Ostrom, Eddy Hall resident, about his dorm's lounge

The See If We Can Explain It To the Liberal Arts Majors Award

"This is a high-power, gee-whiz kind of stuff here."

Mike DeBari, computer administrator, about new graphics lab

The Aren't These Signs Wonderful Award

A tie this semester:

"This is just a great day for UConn."

Dee Rowe, associate director of athletics, on ceremonies dedicating signs which mark the site where a proposed $19 million UConn sports center may be built

"The results come because of the efforts we put into the work."

John Casteen, university president, on the same occasion

The Let's Get It Right Someday Award

Shared by three present or former Undergraduate Student Government Leaders:

"My primary goal is to improve the reputation of the USG in the eyes of the students."

Marcia Knous, USG President
Sept. 24, 1984

"I would like us to work together more with less infighting, to reassess our goals and to represent students better."

Jennifer Rienks, USG Vice President
April 26, 1985

"USG is going to get better."

Kraig St. Pierre, USG President
Sept. 26, 1986

The So Many Other Students Don't Drink Award

"I don't know if you have the right to waste time drinking when there are so many other students wanting to get in UConn."

Carol Wiggins, vice president for student affairs and services

The We'll Wait And See Award

"No. We will not be losing any autonomy. They simply advise us. We choose to act on their advice or not."

Kraig St. Pierre, USG President, on switching to university hired student government advisers

The Aw, Poor Guy Award

"It was a rough day."

Kraig St. Pierre, USG President, on the day adviser Allan Driscoll resigned

The 17,000 Parking Space Cow Pasture Award

"We are proud of the mall because it has the quality of a large mall but the atmosphere of the hometown we deserve."

Jonathan Pelto, state Representative, about expansion to the Eastbrook Mall

The 'Just A Tad Wrong' Award

"I can't wait."

campaign slogan of Julie Belaga, unsuccessful gubernatorial candidate

"I can wait."

Campaign button at Gov. William O'Neill victory party

"I guess we were just a tad wrong. Connecticut can wait."

Belaga in her concession speech

The Yeah, Sure, We Believe You Award

"No, it was definitely not a forced resignation. No one is forced out."

Kraig St. Pierre, USG President, on adviser Allan Driscoll's resignation

"The basic source for most of USG's problems was the lack of a professional adviser."

Kraig St. Pierre

"That could be the reason Al Driscoll is no longer with us."

Steve Protter, USG public relations chairman, on 1986 yearbook ineptitude

The Tossed Award

"The source from which all blessings flow is salad dressing."

Actor Paul Newman announcing plans for a camp in Ashford for seriously ill children which will be financed, in part, by sales of "Newman's Own" salad dressing

FINANCIAL AID DEADLINE
UCONN Students Are Reminded That FEBRUARY 15, 1987 Is The Deadline For Applying For Financial Aid For 1987-88

All students (including incoming Freshmen) must submit both the Financial Aid Application and the Financial Aid Form (FAF). The FAF must be sent to Princeton, New Jersey and the University Application must be submitted to the Financial Aid Office prior to February 15, 1987 in order for financial aid awards to be completed by the fee bill date which is July 15, 1987.

All students who intend to apply for a State Guaranteed Bank Loan should submit their Bank Loan Application at the same time they apply for financial aid. Bank Loan Applications should be picked up at participating banks or at the Financial Aid Office. Application for PELL Grant is included on the FAF. Students must submit their Student Aid Reports (SAR) for the PELL Grant to the Financial Aid Office as soon as they receive it from Iowa City. The Financial Aid Office must have the SAR regardless of the student's eligibility for the PELL Grant.

All students who are enrolled on at least a half-time basis and who have not previously received a Bachelor's Degree from any institution are eligible to apply for PELL.

Deadline for graduate students who previously attended the University of Connecticut is February 15, 1987. Newly entering graduate students' deadline is May 1, 1987.

IMPORTANT: Undergraduates must be considered full-time (earn 12 credits per semester) in order to receive financial aid. Graduate students must be considered full-time by their advisors or departments.

Campus Notable Quotable Awards

"The visibility she gets will have a big impact because they don't see the governor."

Belaga campaign worker, after the unsuccessful candidate's 20-minute appearance at UConn

The Even He Has No Idea What He's Going To Talk About

"He has no set address."

Michael Gilligan, Student Union Board of Governors lecture chairman, on a speech by former President Gerald Ford

The So That's What They Do Award

"The Secret Service usually takes care of that."

Michael Gilligan on who would handle security arrangements for Ford's lecture

The Then Why Were You President Award

"I loved the job, but I have no political ambition."

Gerald Ford on his re-election aspirations

The Good Question Award

"I didn't cause this problem, they did. Why should I spend thousands of my dollars to have it put in?"

Salhattin Kardestuncer, Hunting Lodge Road resident, about costs of getting clean water from university pipes because university is suspected of having contaminated her well

The Nothing Around Here Works Award

USG is "not afraid to try new things. We have to. The old system wasn't working."

Steve Protter, USG public relations chairman

"We looked at USG News and Campus Report and decided it definitely was a failure."

Steve Protter

"They should've been to the damn publisher in July."

Steve Protter on Oct. 24 complaining about 1986 yearbook materials

The Fiscal Management Award

A tie this semester:

UConn developments contribute to property values

By Peter Bryer
Daily Campus Staff

Two years ago, Andrea Tuttle paid $26,000 for a two-lot acre in Mansfield, each lot with a shack on it. Tuttle, a resident of Coventry, said when she bought the property, she "burned one of the houses to the ground," and then put that lot up for sale. After six months, she sold it for $18,000.

She invested $24,000 into the four-room house on the other lot. She gutted it, installed new plumbing and electrical systems, and then rented out the bungalow for $525 per month. But she said, over time she became "tired of being a landlord," and decided to sell the second piece of property also. "It was rented to a deadbeat," she said.

She placed an advertisement in the (Willimantic) Chronicle two weeks ago, asking a price of $69,500. She received an offer of $67,900 after less than a week of placing the advertisement. If the closing, which is planned for next week, goes smoothly, Tuttle will have made more than $25,000 from her investment in Mansfield real estate, about a 100 percent return.

Tuttle, a psychotherapist who practices in Wethersfield, said one reason she was able to get such a quick response was because the proposed Connecticut Technology Research Park has drawn a lot of interest to the area. "The school system is popular," she said, explaining that the Mansfield area attracts a lot of faculty and university employees, especially "with the talk of that research center."

She would not give out the name or any other specific information about the buyer until the deal goes through. However, she said that they are "a young, professional couple."

Although an increase in market value similar to Tuttle's is above the norm, real estate brokers, appraisers, and town officials in the area agree that the values of real property in the area have been on the rise. They attribute the movements in the market to a number of factors including a decline in interest rates, the proposal of the Bolton-Willimantic Expressway, and strictness of the planning and zoning commission.

Another reason given was the development of Connecticut Technology Research Park, the proposed development of 390-acre parcel of land in the northern part of the UConn campus.

The plans for ConnTech Park include a 120-room hotel, and about twenty privately-owned buildings which would be for science research projects.

Robert Stewart, an real estate appraiser from Tolland, said it is all a matter of "supply and demand." "Extra demand will come from people who will work at ConnTech," he said. He said people are buying now because they know "property values will continue to go up." "Some people are trying to get in early," he said.

Stewart was hired by the developers of ConnTech to study the affects of the development on the values of homes on hunting lodge road, the road along which most of the development is planned.

Taylor said he has talked with "quite a few people", and already has reserved some of the Commons' 26,000 feet of retail and office space for major chains such as WaWa convenience stores and Domino's Pizza. "We are trying to establish complementary facilities to what is already here," he said. "We are fully aware of the community's needs, and some interests are not being well represented here."

Taylor said that office space is a major need in the community. "I can't find office space for myself in this town," he said, adding that ConnTech was forced to put their offices to the basement of a privately-owned house for lack of any other available space. He said there is much interest in the Commons' office space, especially among UConn professors and counseling services.

"It is not usual to do as well as I am doing ([with Storrs Commons]," Taylor said. He said, when completed, the complex "will upgrade, both visually and architecturally, the center of Mansfield" and "solidify the retail base." The project involves converting the existant College Theater, formerly owned by Trans-Lux, into a two-level office-retail facility, and constructing a second, similar building between the first and the University Plaza.

Parking space behind the buildings will be "better defined and made flat," he said. According to Taylor, the two buildings, along with the two malls on either side, will provide residents with the same service the Eastbrook Mall does now.

Along with the two projects already underway, Padick said a third has been brought up at Town Hall by attorney Owen Mark Sanderson, who could not be reached for comment.

Sanderson has proposed a building complex for student fraternities and sororities to be located next to the campus, although Padick said it would be a "privately built project" not affliated with the university. The complex, he said, could include retail, office, and living space.

A Red Sox Stocking stuffer

By J.E. Harris
Campus Correspondent

I made my Christmas list out yesterday. Deciding on what to give my family was the hard part. Finding gifts for the Boston Red Sox was easy. Here they are:

1. For Bill Buckner - Crutches and a disguise to wear in the less than friendly sections of Boston.
2. For Bob Stanley - a diet that works.
3. For Oil Can Boyd - a lot less hassle from everyone.
4. For Bruce Hurst - The Nice Guy of the year Award.
5. For Roger Clemens - nothing. What do you give a guy who has everything? More Zest commercials?
6. For Wade Boggs - chicken flavor Gerber baby food for the newest member of the Boggs' bunch, baby Brett.
7. For Tom Seaver, Dave Stapleton, and Tony Armas - contracts to play somewhere.
8. For Don Baylor - a new gavel for his kangaroo court, and for a man as strong as he, anything else he desires.
9. For Rich Gedman - a signing with the Sox by January 8, and a pair of toothpicks to keep his eyes open.
10. For Glenn Hoffman - a complete recovery from his heart disease so he can win his position back in the spring.
11. For Jim Rice - golf balls to throw back at that section of New York fans.
12. For Dave Henderson - the baseball he drilled into the seats in Anaheim in the ninth inning of Game Five. He should have it.
13. For Marty Barrett - two inches.
14. For Spike Owen - hair.
15. For Red Sox fans and John McNamara - an unedited videotape of Game Five in California, and a complete memory loss of the Met's victories in Games Six or Seven.
16. For Calvin Schiraldi - a prize-winning appearance on the David Letterman show and peace of mind
17. And for Dwight Evans - as many reasons for him to smile in 1987 as there were in 1986.

FOILS - Tim Hughes and Trevor Smith have it out. If you're interested in fencing in-depth, see the two-page spread on pages 22 and 23.

Hey, kids (Joanne and Dave)!

We did it! We finished the Fall '86 Features section this morning, probably the first time that we all worked at the same time. Remember the week or so that we were all so sick that we didn't HAVE a Features Department? Today we did the whole section without a single AP wire story (Yeah!). Hear that, Brian? Anyways, good luck with finals and have a good Christmas break. See you next year!

To all of the acquaintances (friends, enemies, whatever...) of Ken. M. (Hicks 3rd):
This green personal is to wish you all a MERRY CHRISTMAS and HAPPY NEW YEAR! Another semester has gone by and along with it many fun times and great memories. I must start off by wishing my five daughters their best winter break ever: Kirsten, Karen, Kim, "K"arrie, and "K"uningham. BETS, have a Merry Christmas but I hope you realize you have another three semesters to get by my revenge. Just remember: I'm not nice! Happy Holidays to "Fresh", Stephanie, and Maureen. Lisa D. in Delta Zeta, we haven't seenmuch of each other this semester, but I hope that changes next semester. Enjoy your break and let's stay in contact. Cindy "Anatomy", the Red-Headed Goddess: I've known you for 2 1/2 years now, and now you're leaving me. I can't imagine what the next 1 1/2 years are going to be like without you. Ijust want to wish you Happy Holidays and good luck in your future endeavors, you can be sure that you will be missed! Finally, to my roommate, Andre, and the rest of the Hicks Hall Gang, enjoy your break and let's get psyched for the spring semester!
Sincerely, Ken M. (a.k.a The LEGEND)

and Kathy L.,
Have a GREAT Christmas! Good luck on exams. We're gonna miss you guys!

Fall 1986 Presentations of the Daily

Compiled by Paul Parker
Daily Campus Staff

People sometimes say silly things, and occasionally profound things, without trying. The Notable Quotable Awards are a salute to those people. Following are the noteworthy quotes heard by The Daily Campus this semester.

The Flunked Out Of Business School Award

"So successful it's going bankrupt."

Ronald Pape, manager of the student credit union, about the union

The Persuasive Presentation Award

"If I were a USG member, I would vote against."

Ronald Pape, manager of the student credit union, trying to convince student government members to vote in favor of credit union funding

The Home Sweet Home Award

"The carpet stinks and the furniture stinks because it's so old."

Brad Ostrom, Eddy Hall resident, about his dorm's lounge

The See If We Can Explain It To the Liberal Arts Majors Award

"This is a high-power, gee-whiz kind of stuff here."

Mike DeBari, computer administrator, about new graphics lab

The Aren't These Signs Wonderful Award

A tie this semester:

"This is just a great day for UConn."

Dee Rowe, associate director of athletics, on ceremonies dedicating signs which mark the site where a proposed $19 million UConn sports center may be built

FINANCIAL AID DEADLINE
UCONN Students Are Reminded That FEBRUARY 15, 1987 Is The Deadline For Applying For Financial Aid For 1987-88

All students (including incoming Freshmen) must submit both the Financial Aid Application and the Financial Aid Form (FAF). The FAF must be sent to Princeton, New Jersey and the University Application must be submitted to the Financial Aid Office prior to February 15, 1987 in order for financial aid awards to be completed by the fee bill date which is July 15, 1987.

All students who intend to apply for a State Guaranteed Bank Loan should submit their Bank Loan Application at the same time they apply for financial aid. Bank Loan Applications should be picked up at participating banks or at the Financial Aid Office. Application for PELL Grant is included on the FAF. Students must submit their Student Aid Reports (SAR) for the PELL Grant to the Financial Aid Office as soon as they receive it from Iowa City. The Financial Aid Office must have the SAR regardless of the student's eligibility for the PELL Grant.

All students who are enrolled on at least a half-time basis and who have not previously received a Bachelor's Degree from any institution are eligible to apply for PELL.

Deadline for graduate students who previously attended the University of Connecticut is February 15, 1987. Newly entering graduate students' deadline is May 1, 1987.

IMPORTANT: Undergraduates must be considered full-time (earn 12 credits per semester) in order to receive financial aid. Graduate students must be considered full-time by their advisors or departments.

UConn developments contribute to property values

By Peter Bryer
Daily Campus Staff

Two years ago, Andrea Tuttle paid $26,000 for a two-lot acre in Mansfield, each lot with a shack on it. Tuttle, a resident of Coventry, said when she bought the property, she "burned one of the houses to the ground," and then put that lot up for sale. After six months, she sold it for $18,000.

She invested $24,000 into the four-room house on the other lot. She gutted it, installed new plumbing and electrical systems, and then rented out the bungalow for $525 per month. But she said, over time she became "tired of being a landlord," and decided to sell the second piece of property also. "It was rented to a deadbeat," she said.

She placed an advertisement in the (Willimantic) Chronicle two weeks ago, asking a price of $69,500. She received an offer of $67,900 after less than a week of placing the advertisement. If the closing, which is planned for next week, goes smoothly, Tuttle will have made more than $25,000 from her investment in Mansfield real estate, about a 100 percent return.

Tuttle, a psychotherapist who practices in Wethersfield, said one reason she was able to get such a quick response was because the proposed Connecticut Technology Research Park has drawn a lot of interest to the area. "The school system is popular," she said, explaining that the Mansfield area attracts a lot of faculty and university employees, especially "with the talk of that research center."

She would not give out the name or any other specific information about the buyer until the deal goes through. However, she said that they are "a young, professional couple."

Although an increase in market value similar to Tuttle's is above the norm, real estate brokers, appraisers, and town officials in the area agree that the values of real property in the area have been on the rise. They attribute the movements in the market to a number of factors including a decline in interest rates, the proposal of the Bolton-Willimantic Expressway, and strictness of the planning and zoning commission.

Another reason given was the development of Connecticut Technology Research Park, the proposed development of 390-acre parcel of land in the northern part of the UConn campus.

The plans for ConnTech Park include a 120-room hotel, and about twenty privately-owned buildings which would be for science research projects.

Robert Stewart, an real estate appraiser from Tolland, said it is all a matter of "supply and demand." "Extra demand will come from people who will work at ConnTech," he said. He said people are buying now because they know "property values will continue to go up." "Some people are trying to get in early," he said.

Stewart was hired by the developers of ConnTech to study the affects of the development on the values of homes on hunting lodge road, the road along which most of the development is planned.

Taylor said he has talked with "quite a few people", and already has reserved some of the Commons' 26,000 feet of retail and office space for major chains such as WaWa convenience stores and Domino's Pizza. "We are trying to establish complementary facilities to what is already here," he said. "We are fully aware of the community's needs, and some interests are not being well represented here."

Taylor said that office space is a major need in the community. "I can't find office space for myself in this town," he said, adding that ConnTech was forced to put their offices to the basement of a privately-owned house for lack of any other available space. He said there is much interest in the Commons' office space, especially among UConn professors and counseling services.

"It is not usual to do as well as I am doing ([with Storrs Commons]," Taylor said. He said, when completed, the complex "will upgrade, both visually and architecturally, the center of Mansfield" and "solidify the retail base." The project involves converting the existant College Theater, formerly owned by Trans-Lux, into a two-level office-retail facility, and constructing a second, similar building between the first and the University Plaza.

Parking space behind the buildings will be "better defined and made flat," he said. According to Taylor, the two buildings, along with the two malls on either side, will provide residents with the same service the Eastbrook Mall does now.

Along with the two projects already underway, Padick said a third has been brought up at Town Hall by attorney Owen Mark Sanderson, who could not be reached for comment.

Sanderson has proposed a building complex for student fraternities and sororities to be located next to the campus, although Padick said it would be a "privately built project" not affliated with the university. The complex, he said, could include retail, office, and living space.

A Red Sox Stocking stuffer

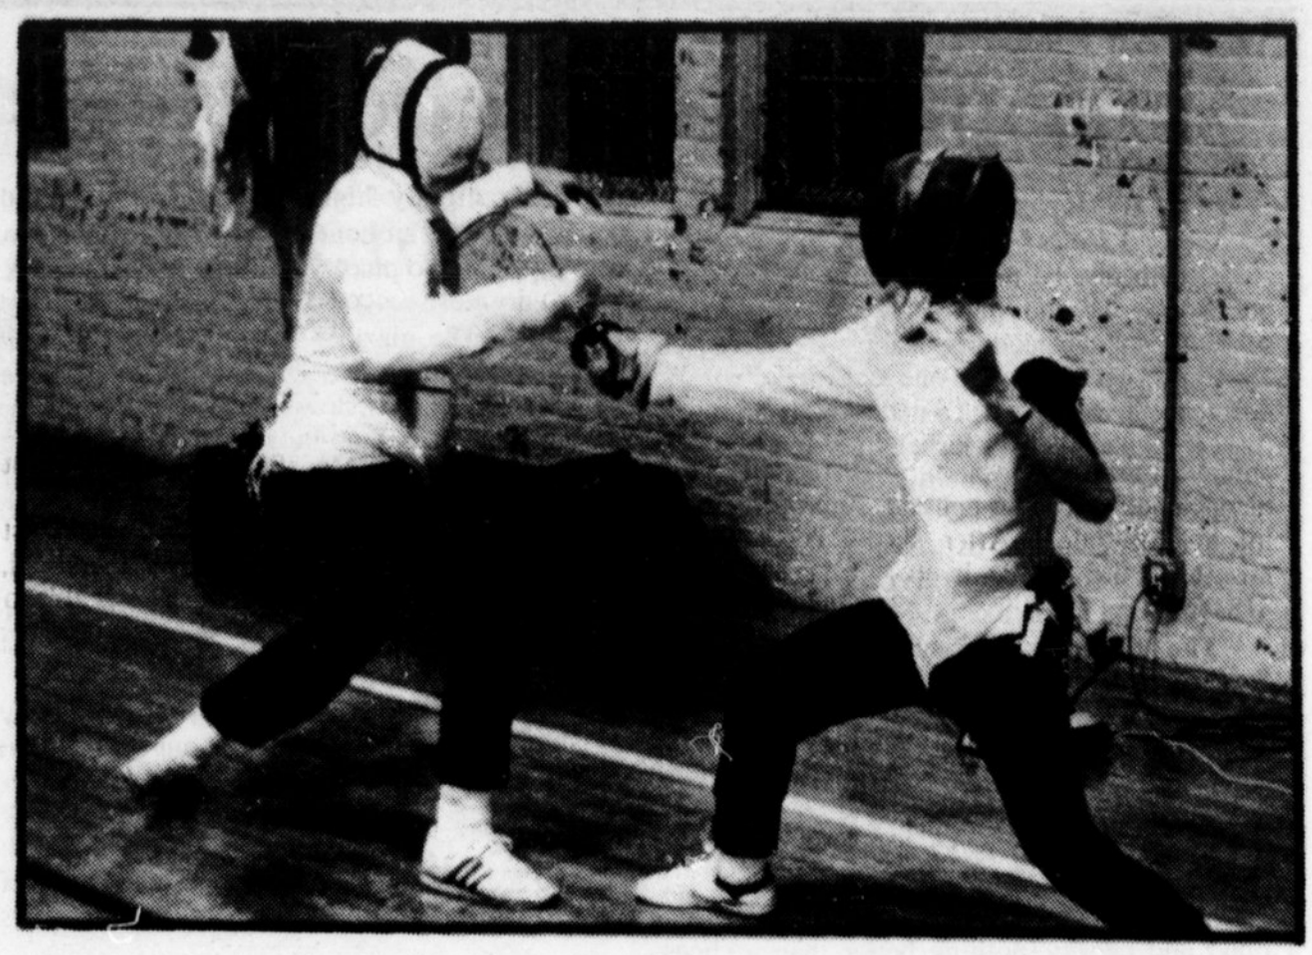
By J.E. Harris
Campus Correspondent

I made my Christmas list out yesterday. Deciding on what to give my family was the hard part. Finding gifts for the Boston Red Sox was easy. Here they are:

1. For Bill Buckner - Crutches and a disguise to wear in the less than friendly sections of Boston.
2. For Bob Stanley - a diet that works.
3. For Oil Can Boyd - a lot less hassle from everyone.
4. For Bruce Hurst - The Nice Guy of the year Award.
5. For Roger Clemens - nothing. What do you give a guy who has everything? More Zest commercials?
6. For Wade Boggs - chicken flavor Gerber baby food for the newest member of the Boggs' bunch, baby Brett.
7. For Tom Seaver, Dave Stapleton, and Tony Armas - contracts to play somewhere.
8. For Don Baylor - a new gavel for his kangaroo court, and for a man as strong as he, anything else he desires.
9. For Rich Gedman - a signing with the Sox by January 8, and a pair of toothpicks to keep his eyes open.
10. For Glenn Hoffman - a complete recovery from his heart disease so he can win his position back in the spring.
11. For Jim Rice - golf balls to throw back at that section of New York fans.
12. For Dave Henderson - the baseball he drilled into the seats in Anaheim in the ninth inning of Game Five. He should have it.
13. For Marty Barrett - two inches.
14. For Spike Owen - hair.
15. For Red Sox fans and John McNamara - an unedited videotape of Game Five in California, and a complete memory loss of the Met's victories in Games Six or Seven.
16. For Calvin Schiraldi - a prize-winning appearance on the David Letterman show and peace of mind
17. And for Dwight Evans - as many reasons for him to smile in 1987 as there were in 1986.



FOILS - Tim Hughes and Trevor Smith have it out. If you're interested in fencing in-depth, see the two-page spread on pages 22 and 23.

Hey, kids (Joanne and Dave)!

We did it! We finished the Fall '86 Features section this morning, probably the first time that we all worked at the same time. Remember the week or so that we were all so sick that we didn't HAVE a Features Department? Today we did the whole section without a single AP wire story (Yeah!). Hear that, Brian? Anyways, good luck with finals and have a good Christmas break. See you next year!

A pizza the action

By Kristen Helfrecht
Daily Campus Staff

Let no one be mistaken, there is a definite philosophy behind pizza. There's a certain subjective logic behind personal pizza preferences. A crisp crust or a soft one can make all the difference in the world. To understand my ratings (the "if . . . then" of my logic), I personally prefer a soft, thick crust with a little tart sauce and lots of cheese and toppings. On this subjective basis I rated the pizza's crust, sauce, cheese, and toppings. Overall ratings (the ones on service and prices) are much more objective.

The one bad thing about Paul's Pizza is that they lack a delivery service. Other than that (and the small size of their pizzas), Paul's serves great pizza and the fifteen-minute wait for one (called in advance) passes quickly, especially if you walk there.

The pizza itself is inexpensive: $5.49 with one topping.

The pizza was hot when purchased (a definite plus) and cheesy,(nothing better than a cheesy pizza), but then again at Paul's you have to order extra cheese to get it that way. The crust is made of a soft and chewy dough had a sauce tart enough to balance the cheese. If the actual pizza was larger, the whole meal would have been perfect.

Pizza Stop is good on several other points. It's inexpensive ($5.75 for a small with one topping). The pizza is hot on arrival. And if you're a regular Pizza Stop customer, they can be very friendly. One fellow I know had not only his own line to Pizza Stop but also only had to give his name and a personal pizza would arrive a half hour later with a friendly note from the staff. Such service!

Pizza Stop just about equals Paul's pizza. It may rate slightly higher because of its rapid delivery (a half an hour). Only the difficulty in actuallycalling to place your order knocks it back into a very close second place.

I personally love Pizza Stop's crust - soft, thick and chewy. They also put a fair amount of cheese and toppings on them. They are the first pizza among deliveries.

The worst is Oscar's. Not only were they atrociously rude when we placed our order, but it also took themover an hour to deliver a half-burned pizza. Thanks, but I'm trying to cut back on carbon. Also, it's incredibly over-priced: $10.15 for a large with one topping and tons of grease. Pizza Stop's large with three toppings is only $9.45. But the absolute worst was when they cut the pizza into squares. Anyone who eats pizza knows that if you cut the pie into squares, the grease invariably runs down your arm while you eat it. Well, Oscar's pizza floods down your arm.

Oscar's also has a thin, dry crust and a bland sauce but decent amounts of cheese and toppings. Still, it's not worth it.

RATINGS	Paul's	Pizza Stop	Oscar's
Service =	B	B	C
Prices =	A-/B+	B+	C-/D
Food Quality =	B	B+	C
Crust =	B	A	B-
Toppings =	B+	B+	B+

He also feels at home with other fencers, believing that each other.

"If you see a weird bag, you think it's a shopping bag, a cello bag or a gun bag but a fencer knows [it is a fencing bag] and it's an immediate kinship. I've been invited to homes—'Come crash with me'–There's an immediate bond.

A Convenient Guide To Computerized BUYBACK

Why A Computerized BUYBACK

FAST • ACCURATE • CONVENIENT

WHAT DOES THE NEW SYSTEM DO?
When you bring your books in we will simply key in the book identifier andthe system will look up the price. At the end of the transaction, you will receive a receipt which will tell you what titles we purchased and what we paid you for them.

WHY WAS THE NEW SYSTEM INSTALLED
These changes will benefit you directly by making buyback faster, by minimizing the chances of errors, and by allowing you to verify the transaction with a detailed receipt.

WILL THIS AFFECT PRICES
No. We will be using the same database we always have. Only now we will be getting the prices through the computer rather than manually looking them up.

Convenient Hours For BUYBACK

FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE BUYBACK WILL BE OPEN MORE HOURS

Mon, Tues, Wed - Dec. 15, 16, & 17
regular hours 8:30 to 5:00
Thurs & Fri - Dec. 18 & 19
8:30 to 7:00 extra hours
Sat & Sun - Dec 20 & 21
8:30 to 5:00 extra hours
Mon Dec. 22 8:30 to 5:00

A Contest For BUYBACK

FREE TEXTBOOKS

Come the closest to guessing one of these three Buyback statistics and you'll get your textbooks for FREE next semester. A drawing will be held in case of a tie.

1. Total dollar amount spent purchasing books during buyback Dec. 15th to 22nd.
2. Total number of books we'll pay 1/2 price for.
3. Total number of Buyback transactions that we'll have between Dec. 15th & 22nd.

Contest entry forms and the figures from last December will be available at the Co-op during Buyback.

How Are Prices Determined For BUYBACK

TEXTBOOKS FALL INTO 3 CATEGORIES

HALF PRICE TEXTBOOKS
If an instructor has notified us that a book will be used next semester we will pay 1/2 the new book price, even if you bought it used. When we have met our anticipated needs for next semester we will then purchase these books for a used book distributor.

BOOKS NOT ORDERED FOR COURSES NEXT SEMESTER
Used book distributors determine the prices we can pay you for these books. Prices are based on nationwide demand and are the result of many factors.

BOOKS THAT WE CAN NOT PAY YOU ANY MONEY FOR
The three reasons why a book may have no buyback value: a new edition has been published; there is little or no nationwide demand; or the book is in poor condition.

A book may move from one category to another during the course of the buyback.

Our Pledge For BUYBACK

THE PLEDGE: You will not find a used book being offered for sale at the Co-op that we bought from you at a whole sale price (less than 1/2 price) during buyback.

HOW WE BACK IT UP
First, we try to pay 1/2 price for as many books as possible. We'll work hard at getting all course book information before buyback. Second, if we receive a late order, before the books are shipped out, we'll attempt to contact the students who sold them to us and pay the additional amount. Third, if you find a book we bought from you at a wholesale price and bring your buyback receipt in, we'll pay you the difference.

Happy Holidays, UConn

Remember when you were a little kid and you always had a list of the presents you wanted for Christmas. It was usually very long and always included a few gifts you knew you would never get but put down just in case Santa felt generous when he passed over your house.

Many of us still have a list, except we realize that Santa isn't as generous when we get older. For most of us, his presents come in the form of tuition payments and a house to sleep in. But whatever your wish be, The Daily Campus hopes they all come true this holiday season.

A simple letter could make someone's holiday

I enjoyed this past Thanksgiving with Bob Yamnicky and his family down in Shelton. Big deal, right? Well, it was for the two of us, considering that we spend last year's Thanksgiving with 115 men under a couple hundred feet of seawater.

Together we comprised the crew of a U.S. nuclear-powered, fast-attack submarine, and the Indian Ocean was our operating station for that autumn holiday season. Our presence there was for a submarine's typical military objective: to deter or destroy any machinery that would deprive the American people of their favorite family feast.

Naturally, we were pleased the world spared itself our services, but the severe confinement of a submarine's environment underscored our own Thanksgiving celebration. The limited supplies for supper was an even greater shock to the officers who, representing the boat's elitist class, were not inclined to eating the only available poultry with the rest of the crew. Though our reaction was "To hell with them," powdered-milk, acidic fruit-drinks, and dehydrated foodstuffs were hardly what we considered the trappings of a happy banquet.

All the same, edible is edible to the hungry, and there were more prominent reasons for discontent in those sailors who chewed with frowns. A few of the guys were still condemning their filipino escorts for giving them a momento of their commercial relationship back in the Philippines—that being a strain or two of gonorrhea. A couple of married personnel were plagued with the fear that their wives were enjoying their Thanksgiving dinners with temporary boyfriends—premonitions that were sometimes true, and in the form of sailors from other ships.

Some of the crew was plotting to shove the entire meal down the Engineering Officer's throat to protest his spineless incompetence. And, of course, there were those sailors who simply complained by virtue of general principle. Though "a happy crew was a safe crew," depression on that Thursday of Thanks was merely the character of living yet another day underwater in a "people tank."

There was, however, no denying the one universal consensus underlining our frustrations: holidays are better enjoyed in an environment of family closeness and private appreciation, and no concrete friendship amongst the crewmembers could ever replace the spirit of those two essentials. There was no compromise on the former, as our return to the States was still two months down the line.

The remedy for the latter, however, was our port-a-call on the island of Diego Garcia scheduled for the week following Thanksgiving. Though we were to have beaches, sunlight, and alcohol at our disposal after 58 days underwater, the American public would have never guessed that mail was our personal priority upon mooring pierside. And every word we read (save for the "Dear John" letters) was worth a thousand of those turkeys that had definitely seen better days.

Though the modern sailor is required to develop more technical skills than before, the social stereotypes of vulgar, drunken, skirt-chasing squids remains relatively solid. Granted, there are plenty of witnesses to confirm these convictions, but it is hardly just to brand the entire fleet as a bunch of raunchy thugs with not enough salt in their trousers. Submariners, with a few exceptions, are a civilized people who find genuine relief from constant 70-hour workweeks in a note of caring from anyone in particular (Okay, okay, writers of the female persuasion are generally preferred).

So take up the cause of appreciation this Christmas and send a card or letter to a couple of sailors who have only themselves for spirit and enjoyment. Write to any, or even all of the following at: USS Portsmouth (SSN 707), Fleet Post Office, San Francisco, CA 96675-2387.

Though these fellows are hardly food for thought this holiday season, it is their presence in the military that maintains our Armed Forces an all-volunteer outfit, as opposed to the mandatory obligation required by most countries of their youth. Happy Christmas, freedom, and good health!

Santa opens up, but he...

How many times have you asked yourself, "How does Santa do it all?"

Well, you can be sure Santa didn't get where he is today by sitting around asking himself stupid questions.

Eons ago, when he was just another ambitious elf, Santa started formulating the philosophythat has enabled him to become the world's No. 1 entrepreneur. Now Santa wants to share the secrets behind his success with you. Yes, the very same secrets that have made Santa's name a household word around the world, a name bigger than IBM, bigger than Sony, bigger even than Coca-Cola, a name, moreover, with endless goodwill, a name synonymous with warmth, caring, generosity and the American way.

Santa wants to share not just his success secrets, but himself, the real Santa, the Santa behind the image, in his new book "The Sixty Second Santa."

You may find this hard to believe, but Santa has seen some tough times. Yes, it's true. Santa has been down.

Santa's low point came when he experienced a crisis of belief. People don't believe in Santa. Santa could accept that. But there came a time when even Santa didn't believe in himself.

After much agonizing, Santa realized, in a moment of blinding insight, that if he couldn't believe in himself he couldn't believe in anything. For Santa, that was the turning point.

Santa learned to believe in himself and so became even more successful than he'd dared to dream. Now Santa wants to help others learn to believe in themselves so they can get what they want, too. That's why he has written "The Sixty Second Santa."

What does Santa get out of it? By helping others, Santa gets what he wants, enormous personal satisfaction and a seven-figure bank account. Santa's legendary generosity is amply rewarded by royalties, residuals, commercial tie-ins, endorsements and fees for personal appearances.

Santa is, obviously, a master of management. And he wants to show you how you can profit from the management techniques he has learned in his long career as a mythical figure.

Santa has wanted to share these thoughts for a long time. However, in spite of his superb management skills, he couldn't find time to write this book until very recently. Thanks to the fantastic success of his last book, "The Santa Claus It's Christmas All Year 'Round Diet," and its companion video "Santacize!" Santa has been able to engage extra elves on the assistant managerial level, freeing him up to write.

Certain cynics have, by the way, suggested that Santa really had nothing at all to do with his diet book and exercise video, that he only lent his name to the project so that it would sell, that he never really lost any weight at all, that he hasn't even seen his own feet in the past millenium. Nothing could be further from the truth, as anyone who has actually seen the new sleeker, slimmer Santa will attest.

The public knows that Santa wouldn't lie. The public knows that Santa puts nothing less than his whole self into every project he undertakes. Their response to "Santacize!" and "The Santa Claus It's Christmas All Year 'Round Diet" was so positive that Santa decided it was time to share another important part of himself with the people who love him.

"The Sixty Second Santa" is handsomely designed and packaged to look a lot more expensive than it actually is.

And watch for Santa's certain-to-be-best-selling autobiography, "Claus," written with William Novak, an intimate look at a Santa for all seasons, in which Santa reveals the truth behind the rumors of rifts in his marriage, his friendship with Jessica Lange, his stay at the Betty Ford Center and much, much more.

...isn't the same anymore

Santa saw it coming around 7:30 p.m. and ducked out the back of his tree on the excuse that he had to feed his reindeer. The elves, who normally do that job, resorted to claiming they were epileptic and the flashing lights were bringing on fits.

The holiday season broke free of all restraints when Thanksgiving ended and the Westfarms Mall in Farmington immediately extended its hours. Shoppers can go there and even though it will take them an average of one hour driving time to find a parking place, they can still get in huge amounts of buying. Some shoppers sitting in the A&W Rootbeer shop said the mall was open until 11:00 p.m. every night until Christmas Eve.

Even Santa—if he could stand the mob and persuade his elves to put up with the sparkling ribbons taped around the borders of the mirrored walls in all the stores—can buy his presents for all the good little girls and boys instead of make them.

Santa, however, prefers not to put up with the holiday run amok, and he's glad he learned his trade in the old days when he had the chance.

Of course, by doing things his way he cuts down on his work load, as the good little girls and boys don't want handmade goods anymore, unless those goods are made by the hands of Calvin Klein.

Santa tried to compete a couple of years ago, and he started putting his own name on a conspicuous place on every toy that came out of his shop. One of his more snappy-minded elves even came up a logo to accompany the name: two tiny reindeer hoof prints; unfortunately children just didn't think the name "Claus" had the pizazz of Klein or Jordache, and besides, the toys that came out of the North Pole factory simply lasted too long.

Those toys were still good when the next season's fashions came out. The kids didn't have good enough reasons to want more.

In the end, Santa and his elven gang decided not to compete, and to go with the shorter work day on the big night, with an earlier departure from Tinsel Town to their off-season retreat in Sarasota.

I don't know. I feel sorry for that right jolly ol' elf, whom we used to wait for, with unblinking eyes and straining ears—whose arrival we began to anticipate as early as Labor Day.

My brothers and sisters and I used to sit down and make out secret Christmas lists as soon as we were out of our back-to-school clothes that first week of September. Our lists were long; it was the only time of the year little kids learned to keep the size of their letters smaller than three inches tall. But the lists were secret because we did not want any elves peering through our windows and deciding we were just a little too concerned with the getting spirit, rather than the giving.

But we made up those lists, and somehow our parents knew that Santa was willing to accept long lists provided we did not expect to get everything on those lists. We agreed to put stars next to the toys we wanted more than anything else, and to allow Santa to use his discretion on the rest.

Then we waited for a quarter of a year with visions of sugar plums dancing in our heads until Christmas Day brought a mixture of surprises and filled orders. And magic.

But the glitter of the malls has put Santa on the defensive, and he's found out it is hard to be jolly and competitive at the same time. So he's opted for jolly. And he's opted for a longer off-season.

He wanders around the new tinsel town, wearing sunglasses to protect his eyes from the darting beams of light that come off the mirrors and sequined displays, and he looks forward to the day after Christmas when he can steer the deer in the direction of their winter haven.

It's just not the fun it used to be, back when the magic was found in his ability to get down narrow chimneys, not in his ability to duplicate the handiwork of Madison Avenue.

The Daily Campus wishes everyone the happiest and safest of holiday seasons. And good luck on finals.

A nutty way to look at the 'Wheel of Finals'

By David Sakowski
Daily Campus staff

I was watching Wheel Of Fortune on T.V. and squirting people who walked by the window with a fire extinguisher. My friends Blotto and Stretch were getting into an argument about whether the contestants are given the answers before the show or not, when my R.A. slipped a piece of paper under the door (He's been afraid to come into our room since that incident with the 37 dead geese).

"Nooo Waaay !!! ",shouted Blotto as he read the paper in his hands. "What is it, what is it," I cried as I watched the color leave Blotto's face."It can't be", he said leaping across the table and rumaging through piles of papers and empty beer cans.

What could it be? Thoughts raced through my mind (not an easy task). Have we all been expelled? Have we been relocated to the dorm for misfit students? Has David Letterman been cancelled?

"Finals. It's time for finals," Blotto said as he fell to his knees. "It can't be," yelled Stretch. "We haven't even finished building our lofts yet."

There it was in black and white. It was like staring at a warrant for your own arrest. All those little numbers and letters, how am I supposed to know what section number I'm in?

"Stop the madness," shouted Blotto. "How could we have let this happen? Did I miss something. Where's my watch?"

I just slouched onto the couch and stared at the T.V., Pat Sajak smiled reassuringly at the camera. Somehow I felt just a little better.

"It boggles my mind," Blotto said. "Like that's hard to do," laughed Stretch. Blotto dowsed Stretch with the fire extingisher. He always did have a temper problem.

"Do you know what we've missed ?", Blotto said slinging papers around looking for a pen. "Do you guys have a calculator?" We stared blankly. "Dumb question?" We nodded.

"OK,OK, I went to a math class once last semester I can do this myself," Blotto said. Stretch and I looked at each other and grinned.

"We missed 45 Monday-Wednesday-Friday classes. 28 Tuesday-Thursday classes, and we must have missed a test or two," he said. "You forgot about the Physics class we went to," Stretch said. "Yea, that was the time we thought we were going to see Caddyshack but we went to the wrong room. Although it was still pretty funny."

"Hey look. That guy just bought a porceline labrador retrieverfor $450.00 ," Blotto said. Some guys are just born lucky, I said.

"Think of it. There were 21 soccer games, 11 football games, and a World Series we missed," Blotto said. "That's a lot of beer we could have drank watching all that." Stretch and I agreed.

"There was more than 90 happy hours over the semester. Do you know how much money you could spend if you went every day? Stretch and I shook our heads. "We don't drink," we said.

"If only we could get on Wheel Of Fortune and have our dreams come true," Stretch said with a sigh. That's much easier done than said, I done said.

A couple hits of lemon pledge and a few satanistic words of praise to Pat Sajak followed by some flashing lights, smoke and eerie noises was all it took.

There we were, eye to eye with Pat Sajak. "Well there is no need for you gentlemen to tell us about yourselves. We all know you are three bad excuses for humans who have no outstanding qualities or funny stories for you to tell us about," Pat said.

Internships available

UConn students Judy Kepner and Kim Groody are two young women who are successfully combinbing internships at the Office of Adult Probation in Hartford with busy personal schedules as well as with their courses.

They spend two days a week assisting Probation Officers in nearly all phases of their jobs.

"What I've learned on this job I could never have received from classroom preparation," says Groody.

With caseloads averaging an alarming 300 plus clients each, probation officers can offer interns alot of "hands-on" experience. Claire Collins, who supervises the Judicial Intern Program with the help of nine coordinators, says "Our students become inovlved almost immediately following their orientation period, and training is done in the office, in court, and in the field."

Interviewing clients and supervising their progress are two of the major components of the program. Others include assisting in the preparation of investigative reports for the courts, contacting community resources, and covering court for probation staff.

According to Collins, internships in all areas of the Connecticut judicial system are available statewide.

"Last year we placed about 150 interns in probation offices, with State's Attorneys and public defenders, as well as in other court offices. The diversity of placements affords students an opportunity to explore career fields while earning credits towards their degrees.

"Students in all majors are eligible to intern with our program," Collins said.

New Offering: Acting for Fun

Special collections kept with delicate care

By Suzanne Flake
Campus Correspondent

Because of the treasures it guards, the special collections department of the University of Connecticut library is kept locked at all times. Visitors must ring the doorbell to gain acess to the area, where more than 200,000 rare and valuable books, manuscripts, broadsides, journals and artwork reside.

On Friday afternoon, a woman taking English 105 asked for help with a term paper about body weight and eating disorders. Ellen Embardo, curator of the Alternative Press Collection, gave her a manuscript from the Fat Liberation Archives. The Fat Liberation movement is dedicated to freeing women from what the organization regards as a national obsession with thinness.

The student took the manuscript into the reading room, a glassed-in area with seven impeccably clean tables across from the front desk. To prevent defacement of materials, pens are not allowed in the reading room, and only pencils may be used for notetaking.

The Alternative Press Collection contains newsletters, pamphlets, books and propaganda from protest groups and other independent organizations. On the front page of the June 1970 issue of "The Seed," published in Chicago and influential in the Yippie counter-culture, is a psychedelic orange, blue, black and green illustration. A barefoot man and woman wearing flowing robes dance in front of a flaming church, smiling triumphantly. The headline reads "We shall celebrate with such fierce dancing the Death of your Institutions."

Publications from the political right are available as well, for example, "The Spotlight," a journal from Washington, D.C., supporting white supremacy. There is also a wealth of literature from the women's movement, including a newsletter from W.A.M.N., Women Against Military Madness, who are striving toi eliminate war toys, and "Thesmophoria," a religous group worshipping a mother goddess.

All special collections materials are kept in the basement, under carefully controlled conditions. The lights are turned off as much as possible, the air is filtered, and books are stacked by size rather than subject, providing a tight, stable fit on the shelves.

"Each piece requires double to triple the care an ordinary book might need" said Embardo. "This is an example of what can happen, " she explained, pointing to a ripped binding. "This book got wet, it dried out, and then someone grabbed it by its spine."

Embardo demonstrated the proper way to pick up an old book. "You place your finger on top of the text block," (where the pages of a closed book are stacked together) "and ease the book up by its sides. Then you open it from the center, always cradling it in your hands."

Some of the books are so delicate that individual boxes have been custom-made for them. Many of these are part of the Gaines Collection of Americana, which includes a book of George Washington's speeches and letters. Washington's signature is faintly visible in pale brown ink on the first page.

Special Collections Director Richard A. Schimmelpfeng said that "in the early 1960s, we had a boom. The legislature was pouring money into the library." The special collections department was established in 1965.

One of its first acquistions was "The Natural History of Insects of China," published in 1798. In still vivid blues, yellows, greens and reds are hand-painted illustrations of butterflies, moths and other insects painted in their natural setting, buzzing around native plants and flowers.

From a shallow, 2 feet by 3 feet, gray, steel box, Schimmelpfeng took out a poster-sized, hand-written proclamation. Called a broadside, the paper was yellow with age and had frayed edges. "This toppled a king," said Schimmelpfeng of the 1766 decree by King Carlos of Spain. It was posted in Madrid and prohibited wearing the popular voluminous capes and three-cornered hats, because they masked a person's identity on a dark street. But the men of Madrid protested violently against the edict, forcing the king to abdicate.

The collection of Spanish language newspapers and periodicals spans three centuries, with more than 2500 volumes on the economic, agricultural and political history of Puetro Rico. The Latin American collection is the third largest in the United States.

Despite the locked door and supervised reading room, "We're here to be used," said Embardo. "Our goal is to preserve these materials for the next 500 years."

. . . a nutty way

"Let's give the wheel a spin and see if you boys are going to leave here alive," he said letting out a horrible cackle.

Blotto spun first. The wh el stopped on $500.00 but Blotto asked for an 'x'. The lemon pledge seemed to have affected his judgement. Stretch was next. He guessed a 't' for $250.00, but blew it on the next spin when he picked 't' again. Pat laughed a gruesome laugh and said, "I think I'm going to like you boys, ha-ha-ha."

It was my turn to spin the wheel and boy was I nervous. In a stroke of genius, I must say, I leaped onto the spinning wheel hurling myself at Vanna White. Blotto and Stretch followed my lead and we ran into the audience yelling, "Give me the head of Grant Tinker."

The rest gets kind of fuzzy, there was a lot of shouting and punches thrown; but I remember waking up in the office of residential life staring John T. Casteen in the face.

It seems that under the influence of something I bought from a guy named Frenchy, Blotto, Stretch and myself tried to take Shippee dorm hostage and drive it to Mexico. Was I surprised to hear this.

So as the three of us sit here in Ted's drinking ourselves even sillier than we already are, we tell this story to unsuspecting freshmen. They don't usually believe us, but hey the story's good for a free pitcher or two.

Competition and recreation: the duel sides of fencing

By Joanne Zuzick
Daily Campus Staff

Sam Norman, a UConn sabre fencer, sits pensively inside the fencing room at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Propped against the edge of a raised strip, the fourteen foot by two foot area a fencer bouts in, he watches his opponents warm up across the room.

"Couple of lefties," he comments calmly, his eyes analyzing their movements. "I remember last year I used to come and say 'I want to win,' and Andy (Goldman, UConn fencing coach) would say 'Don't worry about it. Just go in there and have some fun and win a few—work on techniques.' Now he says, 'Yeah, that'd be neat.' He has confidence in me. He thinks I can win."

At UConn both the recreational and competitive sides of fencing are stressed by the fencing club and its coach, Andy Goldman. Because it is a club, it is able to attract both seasoned fencers and novices.

The university also offers a one credit course in fencing which Goldman teaches. The class is listed in the course catalog as a lifetime sport.

"For fencing this is more times true [being a lifetime sport] than any other sport listed," Goldman says. "If you stay with it, even if you're not faster, you'll get better"

Some join the class for the strenous workouts, some because they want to meet people and some because they enjoy the uniqueness of the sport.

Matt Gerritsen, a freshman in the fencing class, was first introduced to fencing in high school.

"It was hack and slash, hack and slash. We didn't get into touching people. We just kept knocking swords out of people's hands—Bloodlust," he said.

A semester later, Gerritsen plans to stay in the club.

"It's cool. Andy's a buddy. I think I'm a lot more enthusiastic about the club because Andy is so enthusiastic about teaching us," he said. "I also got to know people who live around me. You get to know people intimately by killing them!"

Once they join the class, Goldman tries to teach prospective fencers the basics of footwork and bladework while still maintaining the recreational, fun side of the sport.

"You have to allay their fears. It's awkward and you feel stupid so you fool around more," Goldman said.

During the first class, they are taught the enguarde, the basic starting position of fencing. A fencer must stand with his feet shoulder width apart with the front foot at a ninety degree angle to the back one. They then crouch down making sure the front leg points forward without bending inward. Their front arm is held a hand's width away from the body, with the lower portion of the arm parallel to the floor. The back hand is held back in the flair commonly associated with the sport.

"I felt very awkward. I felt that it would take a miracle to get any better," Teresa Saunders, a freshman in the class, said. "Now I'm better than pathetic."

"I was a little bit frightened—someone's coming at you with a blade. I was frightened of hurting someone," Marie Garlasco, another class member, said. "I felt a bit awkward at first. I realized that when I watched it [fencing], it looked really easy, but now I know it's not."

Once a beginner becomes acquainted with the basics of footwork such as advancing, retreating and lunging, and has learned the basic bladework such as parrying, he has to face possibly even a bigger obstacle.

"Concentration is the toughest part. Not only do you have to be in shape physically but you have to be mentally alert at all times. The toughest part is keeping your concentration at all times during a tournament," John Daigle, a fencer for two years, said.

"It's the conscience that's the hard part. Your body will keep going but your head will go," Goldman said. "There's so much concentration and stuff going on in your head."

Although each bout lasts only about five minutes, they are physically draining. During a tournament, a fencer often faces more than 15 or 20 bouts.

"Not after I win, no [I'm not tired]. After I lose, yes," Kevin Garrett, vice-president of the club, said. "Obviously you'll feel better after you win."

Most people in the United States still picture the sport in a romantic light, envisioning images of the Three Musketeers.

"It's not a run of the mill sport," Goldman says. "It's still a sport that'll stop a cocktail conversation.

"Fencing is not a common sport. In Europe it is, but not here."

During the past decade, however, fencing has gained more recognition due to better coverage during the Olympics and the establishment of more places to learn the sport. Goldman attributes much of this to the efforts made by the United States Fencing Association (USFA), based in The Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colorado.

"The USFA does a lot to popularize the sport," Goldman says. "Nationally they have the finals in a theatre nearby now. They have become quite showy affairs."

The UConn fencing club holds their tournaments at Hawley Armory. This semester they sponsored three tournaments. During the Renegade Rally on November 22, Daigle took second place and Garrett took third. In another USFA tournament this past Sunday, Daigle won first place.

The club also participates in intercollegiate tournaments throughout the New England area such as this semester's

Jazz Duo Plays UConn

The Mitchell-Ruff Duo will present an evening of diverse and cultured jazz at Jorgensen Auditorium in the intimate cabaret setting at the University of Connecticut January 30 at 8:00 p.m.

Billed by Ruff himself as "the oldest continuous group in jazz without personnel changes", this formidable duo was officially formed in 1955 when pianist Dwike Mitchell and bassist and French horn player Willie Ruff left Lionel Hampton's band to strike out on their own. They continually present a rare combination of jazz piano, bass, and French horn that has been amazing audiences from the beginning.

Since their beginnings over thirty years ago, their talent has taken them to many corners of the world. It was the Mitchell-Ruff Duo that introduced jazz to the Soviet Union in 1959 and to China in 1981 in an effort to showcase not only their own talent, but the freedom of American jazz as well.

Now this unique, esteemed duo comes to Jorgensen Auditorium, bringing with them a talent that makes them the perfect jazz combination. They present their art in such a way that it seems simple and clean. Their talent will amaze and astound you, and they will leave you begging for more.

UConn grad tours with Ray Charles

By Beth Hamilton
Daily Campus Staff

Morris Pleasure just returned from a six month tour with Ray Charles . Pleasure, a UConn graduate as of last May, is a bass player with talent to spare.

An audition tape sent to Charles three years ago resulted in a year wait for Pleasure, but he played guitar in a few gigs with Charles. Last year the response was more immediate, "I sent him an audition tape and since he knew my work he called me up right away for an audition." His three year wait paid off, Pleasure was picked out of nine other bass players for the one coveted position in the 17 piece big band.

Pleasure has realistic recollections of working for a demanding musician such as Charles: "He's a very demanding guy to work for, he conducts the whole band from his seat," Pleasure said, "He's also very temperamental, he's subject to change the tempo, anything , right in the middle of rehearsal." But there were definite advantages to even out all the hard work.

The band toured throughout Europe, Japan, the Canary Islands, Brazil, Hawai and all over the U.S. and Canada. Along the way Pleasure was able to meet many jazz personalities while playing at festivals. Among them were Clark Terry, Wynton Marsailles, Herbie Hancock, Chick Corea and Miles Davis, When asked what Davis was like, Pleasure said, "Just like he looks." But it is Charles that he speakes the highest of.

"Ray is incredible", Pleasure said, "I've never met anybody with more soul in his body." Working with Charles was a challenge, "He always knows what he wants, and he always gets it," says Pleasure. The learning experience is valuable and the work is rewarding, according to Pleasure.

When asked to choose a favorite song out of the many that the band performed, Pleasure recalled two with fondness. "I Got News" , a blues tune in which Charles sang and played the piano, was one. "At the end of the piece Ray would jump up off of his bench, it used to get to me," said Pleasure. A beautiful ballad titled "She Knows" was a duet in which Charles sang and Pleasure played bass, "You almost had to cry at the end," Pleasure recalled.

Pleasure graduated with a degree in music, but that wasn't always his major. "I was in the school of Engineering," Pleasure explained, "that's why I came to UConn." But he has no complaints about the music department, "It's very good , I had excellent professors," Pleasure said. His wife is currently enrolled in the music department here.

Future plans include a move to N.Y.C. for Pleasure and his wife. He intends to write music, and would like to tour with other musicians again. From now until May Pleasure will be playing occasional gigs around the U.S. with Charles.

Pleasure recalls an incident that happened while on tour this summer, "A friend of mine was auditioning and Charles didn't feel he was ready to tour, so Charles says to him, 'Sometimes you may not be ready for something right away, but that doesn't mean you shouldn't stick with it.' And I remembered that this had been true for me, I stuck with it and eventually I did tour with Charles, he knew when I was ready."

... developments increase property values

He gave his findings at a December third public hearing that ConnTech would not "adversely" affect the property values along Hunting Lodge Road. When asked if the development would add to the values of properties on Hunting Lodge Road, Stewart said that he wouldn't touch that question "with a ten foot pole."

In 1982, the drinking wells of the residents on Hunting Lodge Road were found to be contaminated, possibly from a number of chemical pits dug by the university.

Chic Reincke, owner of Reincke Realty in Willington, said that "the prices of houses have gone up a lot" over the past year. Reincke, an appraiser and broker, said the value of the average home in the area has increased by about 25 percent.

Reincke said that ConnTech Park "will be a shot in the arm" for the Storrs area.

"The whole area looks good," said Reincke. "The Storrs area is one of the up-and-coming in the Northeast," he said.

Records in the town assessors's office verify the increases in value. Although the selling price of the average house in Mansfield has remained steady over the last two years, around $85,000,

Herbert F. Braasch, the Mansfield town assessor, said the sales assessment ratio, the percentage of the properties market value that is taxed, is a better comparative indicator of values because the town tries to keep the amount of taxable value constant based on the properties last assessment. Assesments are done every 10 years in Mansfield. The last one was done in 1980.

From the period of Oct. 1, 1985 to April 30, 1985, 48 properties were sold with the average price of $86,195. The sales ratio for those properties was .6009, meaning that 69.01 percent of the property's market value is taxed. The sales ratio for 62 homes sold during the period of Oct 1, 1985 to July 30, 1986, with the average price of $84,040, was .5502.

When asked if he saw the trend that the values of property in Mansfield have been increasing, Braasch said he "absolutely agrees."

Braasch attributed the increase of value to an increase in demand for houses sparked by the decline in interest rates over the last few years. A mortgage rate a year ago was about 15 percent. Today, a home buyer could expect to take out a loan at 13 percent.

Braasch said property values are also increasing due to the development of ConnTech Park, which will attract more faculty and university employees.

The town assessor said the strictness of the Planning and Zoning Commission guarantees Mansfield residents a "protected environment." As an example, Braasch said a Mansfield resident could be assured that they would not see a trailer park or gas station built next to their residential home.

The Bolton-Willimantic Expressway is also expected to be a boost to the Mansfield area. If approved, the highway will make access to Hartford easier, which could mean more Hartford workers might decide to live in the vicinity of the Expressway in order to avoid the high prices of housing in the Hartford area.

Along with the increasing market values is an increase in the number of developments. Between February and August of 1986, 28 residential properties were completed with a total market value of over $1.2 million. Between August and September, a two months span, 18 more homes were completed.

Also, the Courtyard Condominiums built across from the Storrs post office have been well "accepted," according to Samuel Shcrager, the developer of the complex of which all 26 market ready units have already been sold.

The condominiums were offered as two and three-bedroom apartments. The two-bedroom apartments sold for $110,000 when they first hit the market, Shcrager said. But he said they were so well received that he was able to increase the price to $115,000.

Shcrager said that the proposed development of ConnTech had no impact on the sales of the apartments. He said a "mix" of graduate students, investors, retirees, families, and professors have caused the initial phase of his development to sell out.

"I didn't know they would be as successful as they were," Shcrager said. He said people in the area are conservative but have now come to accept the concept of a condominium.

Professor Byrl Boyce, head of the finance department here at UConn, has purchased one of the Courtyard condominiums. He attributed its success to its good location. He said that it would be "premature" to relate any changes in the values of property to the development of ConnTech, especially because nothing is definite yet.

Boyce said that the entire northeastern region is experiencing normal growth and that the rest of the nation has stagnated a bit over the last few years. He also said that the Bolton-Willimantic Expressway "eventually will benefit" the community.

Senate proposes added 'W' courses

By Kathleen Brett
Daily Campus Staff

Beginning in the fall of 1988, all students entering UConn must complete two W courses in addition to English 105 and 109, the University Senate Committee proposed Monday.

Since 1980, only the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences has required three W courses for graduation.

Thomas Suitz, chairman of curriculum committee, presented the proposal. He said, "The proposal hopes to facilitate the phasing in of W courses throughout the university."

The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences will continue to require W three courses for graduation, he said.

The proposal also states that the minimum total writing requirement for a W course must be fifteen double-spaced finished pages, approximately 4000 words.

Suitz also proposed that various models for W courses be available. In some cases the writing component will be thoroughly integrated with the course content, he said.

Alternatively, an already existing, non-writing course might receive a supplementary component and become available as a W course with an increased number of credits.

W course credits may be earned only on the basis of individual writing, the proposal said. In other words, a portion of a group presentation may only count as W course credit only if the student's individual work is clearly defined as his or her own.

The committee will vote on the proposal at their meeting in February, he said.

Judith,
Merry Christmas to the best roomie ever! Thanks for being such a great friend. I'll be thinking of you in Mexico. Happy Holidays!!! Love, Paula

Lena,
Your first personal! Merry Christmas! Thanks for being such a great friend. Get psyched for Mexico!!! Happy Holidays! Love, Paula

Yes , Alright, so it took all semester, but you finally get a personal. Have a Merry New Year and a Happy Christmas and...uh...Never mind! Santa 2.

To my friends in Fairfield, thanks for the great semester and the memories. I hope you all have a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Best of luck Val! Enjoy! Love, Amy P.

Dear Amy (Fairfield 2nd), Thanks for being such a great friend and roommie. Enjoy being able to go home finally. Love always, Denise

Chris and Melinda (Fairfield), I hope you've both had a great first semester! Happy 18th birthday! Enjoy the break. I'll miss you! Love, Denise

Don and Keith—The new brothers of Sigma Chi, Congratulations on your initiation! We'll have to celebrate—Love, your big sisters from Kappa—Tina and Julie

What will Santa bring you??
Maybe what the Great Pumpkin couldn't find...Just in case would you settle for more jelly-beans, pina coladas, & frozen brownies?! Good Luck on your finals! Love, your roommate

Dave, Now you can say you got a personal. You are the best RA I ever had. Congratulations Barb

Harold, How aobut a lobster dinner and a movie? Flashdance perhaps? And in case you're really wondering, I didn't lie. I hate you! Love, Matilda

Paula (R.A. Batterson C) Tuesday night was the best. Love, John, Joel, Dave, Ted, Tony, Thong, Bob, Fred, Colin, Steph, Randy, Sam, Chris, Mike, Andy, Mike, Jim, and Josh. Your puty brings joy to us all. Thanks for showing us your Volvo. It was the best ride we ever had.

Andy—I'm going to miss you over break. Are the wine glasses still unused? When is our next intimate bar corner rendezvous? Soon, I hope. From the girl in the Hard Rock cafe shirt.

Jamie and John: Here's your formal apology. Sorry if any offense was taken, none was intended. Hope you had fun. Jamie, when are we going to run? Love the gooberette

To Karen N., The Troy Phantom! Congrats on a well done job. Good luck in PB and with Steve. Love, Silvia

Hi Beautiful, Happy 21st B-day From L.I. I'm sorry I can't be here to share it with you, but I hope this will help to shorten the distance between us. I love you!! Special K

On December 13, 1985, we kissed in the rain. That was one year ago come this Saturday. In that timespan we have done a lot; An artificial beach, trips to the real beach, December 31, Chunky Chocolate Coco, fought, given up, and then picked up all the pieces to reassemble our priceless love. We mended the scars with cookies, private dinners, the Honeymooners, Hugs, presents, and promises. We learned to grow together, to understand each other, and repect each other. That's one for our side Adrienne. and we will show everyone how wrong they were when we kiss again December 13, 1986

To my little baby: Hopefully you get the unwrapped sausage you want! Merry Christmas! I'll Love you Always! Your little Baby

Sweetheart, Dearest: What more could I want for my birthday, besides to be with you? I love to "study" together. Let's study together real soon. Your Blonde Engineer. P.S. I love YOu!!

Prep: Thanks for the pizza! Want to bet on today's Calc exam? We'll get it while were studying for our Chem final. (Sep can help us study too!) Merry Christmas DD

Congrats Zeta Psi on your new officers. Best of luck on a great semester next year. Looking forward to seeing some more exciting entertainment though. Theres nothing more exciting that you Goon! Congrats on Ha-Award.

To my most savagest of friends, Shelli: Hope you use the Christmas gift soon! I'll miss you next semester! Merry Christmas and good luck next year! Love you - the savage in room 310!!!

Wendy, Sweetness It's over! From Happy Hours in Hartford buckets to being stranded, "Charlie, where's the car?" to doing the Hokey Pokey in the grad field. Clink, clink, clink, Hey it's ok! It's Albany! Sure! But all these times (as they lay spent) don't compare to the many laughs we've had just us together. Word Games! I love you. You are my best friend. Good Luck at SUNY Sorry for all the a[illegible] but who's going to bother you now????
ELIZABETH

To The Queen of the Motor Oil Company - Thanks for being such a fantastic roomie and friend this semester! Always remember David and Paul running through the park, the entire Grease soundtrack, and the sound of perfume bottles dropping on the floor. Have a Merry Christmas and please come visit me and my new best friends next semester. I'll miss you Love ya lots. Glenn's sister

TO BRIAN, MIKE, STEVE, AND ADAM: HAVE A GREAT WEEK OF FINALS AND THE BEST HOLIDAYS POSSIBLE. WHO KNOWS, I'LL PROBABLY BE HERE TO HELP CELEBRATE YOUR LEGALITY. THANKS FOR EVERYTHING YOU'VE DONE FOR ME THIS SEMESTER, PARTIES, FINANCE, CENTIPEDE, THE COMPUTER. WHAT ABOUT NEW YEAR'S EVE???? LOVE ALWAYS MICHELE

TO OTHER SPECIAL MEMBERS OF GOODYEAR B: JIM, OT, JEB, BILL, BRIAN F., REGGIE, JOHN, ERIC, CARL, DANA, JORDIE, AND EVERYONE ELSE: HAVE A TERRIFIC BREAK AND THANKS FOR PUTTING UP WITH ME IN THE DORM ALL THE TIME. DO WELL ON YOUR FINALS. I'M SURE MOST OF YOU NEED TOO. LOVE, MICHELE

SANDRA DEE:
WHAT CAN BE SAID, THIS HAS BEEN ONE INTERESTING SEMESTER. FROM CO-OP TO CLASSES TO TEACHERS TO GOOD FRIENDS TO EX-BOYFRIENDS TO PRESENT COMPANIONS. THE LIST COULD GO ON INDEFINITELY. I WOULDN'T HAVE SURVIVED ALL THE EXCITEMENT WITH OUT YOU. I PROBABLY WOULDN'T HAVE HAD ALL THE EXCITEMENT IF YOU WEREN'T MY FRIEND SO I HAVE TO THANK YOU, I THINK???? WE WILL DO "WONDERFUL" ON OUR EXAMS AND "NO, NO, NO, YOU DON'T UNDERSTAND, WE MUST DO WELL." HAVE A FABULOUS BREAK AND FUN FILLED CO-OP EXPERIENCE. MAYBE I'LL SEE YOU BACK HERE AFTER BREAK. HAVE A NON-INJURIOUS CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEARS.
LOVE MOM

BABE,
WELL OUR FIRST SEMESTER TOGETHER WASN'T TOO BAD I DON'T THINK. YOU DID SUPER AND I DID FAIR. WITH YOUR LUCK, I'LL BE BACK TO HAUNT YOU NEXT SEMESTER SO DON'T WORRY ABOUT US. YOU HAVE BEEN VERY UNDERSTANDING THE ENTIRE SEMESTER WHICH LEADS ME TO BELIEVE THAT WE ARE MEANT TO BE. GOOD LUCK ON YOUR FINALS EXCEPT WITH YOU LUCK IS NOT NEEDED. I CAN'T WAIT TO HIT THE SLOPES AND GO TUMBLING DOWN WITH YOU. CHRISTMAS WILL BE GREAT AND THANKS FOR THE CAMERA. OH, BY THE WAY YOUR GIFT IS A... NAY, YOU CAN WAIT. YOU'VE WAITED THIS LONG. SEE YA TONIGHT.
YOUR LITTLE PRINCESS

RENA, DONNA, KATHY AND THE REST OF HALE 2ND: THANX FOR MAKING ME FEEL COMFORTABLE, EVEN IF I AM ONLY A VISITOR. YOU GUYS ARE GREAT! LOVE, SIAN

Kathy, Sherri, Terri, and Laura, Thanx for last Thursday! You helped me accomplish my college goal! Now what? First time wasted maybe? Just remember that this is all Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer's fault for corrupting me as a child. Merry Christmas! Love, Tracy

Pat Sweeny - Merry Christmas from your little Secret Santa! p.s. To find me before tonight look for a famous singing trio!

Mike O' L, have a great Christmas! Hope it's "different"! First thing next semester we're going to lunch again. Love, Tracey! P.S. -When do I get the snowflake sweater?

DIANE : HAVE A MERRY! I'LL MISS YOU WHEN I'M GONE BUT I'LL BE BACK IN TIME TO SNEAK INTO YOUR GRADUATION. LOVE, JENNIFER

Kristen, Brock 1st:
Thanks for being a great roommate. Don't move me out, I may not be going anywhere. Have a Merry Christmas and good luck on your Finals. If I do not return, well that means everything worked out.
Michele

Kim—Hey babe! Hope you get a good grade in psych in a big kind of way as opposed to a little kind of way). Never forget the fun times in Webster (the yak pak, my first buzz, J.S., R.D., and everything else). So when's the Set Back Tournament? Do you know how much studying we put aside for that? Not enough. Oh well, we'll have to try better next semester. Never forget how sensitive you-know-who's eyes are (besides yours-the man with puppy dog eyes!). Have fun with your full bodied man (Jeff). See you next semester (or over break maybe!) Give my love to Dudless! Merry Christmas!! Luv, Jungle Tracey Guess?

Sue: Hey, you wench! Good luck on finals and have and awesome break. We'll definitely have to get together and hit the town. Get psyched to be out of control tonight. You're the best—Lori

BUBBLE HEADED BLEACH BLONDE: I KNOW THIS IS LATE, BUT ABSENCE MAKES THE HEART GROW FONDER. YOU CAN CASH IN ON YOUR BET AND MY DINNER ANYTIME. LOVE, THE EVIL ONE.

Kim and Kris: Merry Christmas. Kris — I hope you get Pee Wee Herman for Christmas! Kim, you can have Rob Lowe, okay? Love, The Trendy B----h!

Mary Margaret — What can I say? How about shut up --- and drive? This semester has been out of control!! Shall we recall a few of the highlights? How about.....Huskies, the merry-go-round, Bumble and Bee, grain on the brain, Hi-Ho, Hi-Phi, rack 'n' pinion steering, McDonald's store tour with Dick the braille manager, Sig Ep?!!, passing out with a phone up your butt??!! Where does it END? I'm not sure, but thanks so much for all the great memories so far — you're such a special friend and I LOVE YOU! Get ready for the ski trip — I'm bringing the green underwear...It's time to ride the bull at the Rusty Nail! What are ya' - reflecting?, What are ya', What are ya', What are ya' — MARY I'M GETTING SICK OF YOU — Listen chick, next semester should be filled with even more chills and thrills. By the way, HAPPY EARLY BIRTHDAY you ignoramous — we're celebrating at STOWE, over break, after break and of course IN THE BAHAMAS!!! HAVE THE HAPPIEST OF HOLIDAYS YOU BIG BIT--!
Who loves ya' baby? I guess I do even though you're UGLY and your mother dresses you funny. Basically, this is the end.
— LOVE, CINDY (the one who kicks your butt in racquetball!!!)

Vonda — my darling daughter: Best of luck on finals; I know you'll do great. Have fun over break and get psyched to become a sister when you get back. Love and loyally, Lori.

To the man who drives the orange-red Maverick:
I love you.
Merry Christmas.

To Gil: The entire Daily Campus Staff wishes you the Happiest of Holidays.

Erskine,
Enjoyed watching your piercing eyes this semester ... and your writing. Merry Christmas.

To the blonde girl sitting in the cafeteria wearing a sweater and pants, I'd like to meet you. Please respond to Peter in personals.

Scotty,
Beam me up.
Jim K.

PETER AND DAVE:
YOU GUYS ARE HOT AND WE WANT YOU!!! WE CAN'T WAIT TO DANCE WITH YOU AGAIN AT NEW WAVE NIGHT...OF COURSE, WE'LL HAVE TO FIGHT OFF ALL THE OTHER BABES WHO WANT YOU TOO...
MAY YOUR HOLIDAYS BE HAPPY AND FUN.
LOVE, CINDY AND MARY

Janet (Wright A):
Just so you know that I haven't forgotten you...MERRY CHRISTMAS!! Have a good one, I love ya.
Beth

Cindy,
Shape up or ship out. You're on thin ice, and hanging on a thread. Your pink slip is filled out. Be careful.
Love, Peter

Flinthead and Yoko:
We wish you a Merry Christmas and a New Year filled with illicit behavior and good cheer.
Love, the unshaven M.E. and the N. Diamond Fan

John (Litchfield 1st): Dude! Bring the mint green "teddy" up next semester! Have a great break! Hope Santa leaves you wha you deserve (I won't say what though!) Love, Tracey (your favorite redhead)

Hey Tim and Gregg — We're all just sitting around counting the tile son the ceiling. Don't talk about finals all the time. Tim: Food-fight tonight!!

To Rachel:
Merry Christmas! Watch out for those crazy sea bats.
Love, Kathy

To Daren — Merry Christmas! Sorry I was rude to you in Store 24. Maybe sometime we can get together next semester. Take care, Kathy
P.S. You have really beautiful blue eyes!

Hey Dan: Best luck in the future! Stop doing so much crack. And don't set the room on fire again! Your roommate: the Dude.

Daily Campus Staff members — Come to the real reason why UConn was ranked 6th in the nation — the Daily Campus Christmas party Friday night. Followed by breakfast at Gil's.

Nancy T.,
Your pledgeship is coming to an abrupt close. My identity will soon be revealed along with other Theta secrets. Have a great break.
Your P.P.

Robert: Good luck on finals. Why don't you get a real major though? Hope you have a joyous vacation especially on your cruise! When are we going to Margaritaville? Or are you going to meet us at Ted's? Maybe we can visit Ralph over vacation.
L

To Ann, Pledge of Kappa Alpha Theta: Roses are red, violets are blue, you don't know me, but I know you. Not much longer until your invitation! Love, your Pansy Pal

Gary S.,
So glad you could escort me to dinner. Sorry that it wasn't shrimp and steak, but at least you got dessert!! Can't wait to see you over break. Will Ralph's ever be the same?
The Mouth

To those Thetas who will be leaving us: Amanda, Tara, Camille, Kathleen, Jill, Tracey and Lori: Let's not say good-bye, just see you later alligator.
Theta love always.

To Krissy, the University Scholar of Kappa Alpha Theta: Congratulations! Thanks for your major contribution to our awards! Have a relaxing vacation. Love, Your Big Sister.

Leslie —
My hips and I thank you for all the red licorice. Hi, Jen. See you in the house, not soon enough!

Carmela (My favorite Massuese): Thanks for all the great massages, and especially the hugs. I don't know how my back or the rest of me will survive break without them.
Love, Brian (your personal manservant).

To Cindy the knock-out blond typist: You are what makes my heart beat. Without you life would be nothing more than something to do between sleeping. Lets spend eternity together (or at least a significant portion of it)! See you tonight. Love, Paul

To Ronda Beth S.: Tonight's the night of destiny. After so many months of anticipation and high anxiety two of the greatest lovers in the history of the world will finally be united in an extravaganza never before seen by man, woman or child. Can the world handle it? Will the university crumble? Will the KGB infiltrate to learn the great secret of this romance? Learn all this and more—tune in to the next episode of as Cindy's Party Turns—on a cable station near you.

Andrea: Hi hun, just checking up on how you're doing. Have a great day. Good luck on finals. The other wire editor.

To all the beautiful night typists: You guys are the greatest. Thanks for putting up with all of my garbage. The short blonde wire editor.

To Sian: I loved your posters. Can I see the real thing sometime? Have a great Easter and a happy Fourth of July. Maybe you'll get paid sometime; I know I'd pay you if you'd do layout for me. Have a good time, keep the shiny side up. Love (and other four-letter words beginning with L) Paul

To Tracey the gorgeous blonde-soon-to-be-red-head: Why would you want to be all wash out? Blondes have more fun. I wish I were a blonde; then we could have fun together. So ist das Leben! Fröhliche Weihnachten! Paul Jodi: I guess I fooled you this time! What are you doing looking for personals, anyway? Good luck on finals and have a fantastic break!!!! (P.S. You guys who thought I forgot you, Sharon Lori, Patty, Kathy, Cori, Lori, Kellie and Gert, we made it through another semester-have a great one!

Wita: Merry Xmas and a semi-sober New Year! Tequila w/worms, roaches, PJ parties, nincompoop to nympho, Victor, Craig, and the color mauve. You are my favorite roomie and I love ya, Sonj

To all the sisters of Kappa Alpha Theta: What a semester, huh!!!! Thank God it's over. GOOD LUCK on finals and have a safe and happy break. Everyone meet at Toad's Place on Wednesday, January 14th for my birthday, OK?!!! Merry Christmas, Sian

Christmas specials you'll never see

By Sam Mendlestein
Daily Campus Staff

8:00 Tuesday, December 16 on ABC
The Terminator Who Stole Christmas - Watch out, Grinch. For years we've watched your attempts to destroy Christmas for the residents of Whoville, only to sell out in the end and return all the commercial symbols of this once religious holiday. Well, all that is about to end. A being known only as The Terminator has come to put an end to Whoville once and for all. See Christmas trees go up in flames. See lights and stars explode. See little Cindy Lou Who pumped full of lead and splattered all over the living room wall. For years, people have wanted to end Christmas in Whoville. Finally, the right man is on the job.

Midnight Friday, December 12 on NBC
The Michael Meyer/Jason Christmas Variety Special - Bob Hope couldn't make it this year, so Michael Meyer of Halloweeen fame teamed up with buddy Jason from Friday the 13th to bring you the most unusual Christmas variety show ever. Michey and Jake are joined by the stars of your favorite slice and dice movies. Meet the demented murderers from Happy Birthday to Me, My Bloody Valentine, and Pieces. Dance numbers by the Living Dead and those fun guys from The Texas Chainsaw Massacre. Special appearance by Satan Claus from the Christmas classic Silent Night, Deadly Night.

9:00 Monday, December 15 on CBS
Rudolf the Rednose Reindeer: The Inside Story - The tragic account of history's most famous reindeer. Shunned by the other reindeer during his youth, Rudolf sought comfort in a bottle. In this true recount of his life, Rudolf tells all: from his life on skid row to his days of drug addiction and prostitution. Truly a heart-wrenching story.
10:00 Thursday, December 18 on channel 69
Oh, Tannenbaum! - Brand new for 1986. John Holmes plays Andrew Tannenbaum, a real-life Santa Claus who, on Christmas Eve, visits all good little girls too old to believe in Santa. Linda Lovelace (known for her Oscar-winning acting in the classic children's story Deep Throat) plays Naughty Nina, a girl who refuses to be good until Tannenbaum shows her the present she would have gotten. Destined to become a Christmas classic.

9:00 Wednesday, Decembr 17 on ABC
Christmas in Far-Away Lands - A documentary on how Christmas is celebrated in foreign lands. Featured are clips on Christmas Eve parties in Siberia and South America. Clips from the 6:00 News are shown throughout. Very educational for the children.
10:00 Wednesday, December 24 on NBC
'Twas the Night Before Christmas - 'Twas the night before Christmas/ And all through the place/ Everyone was plastered/ And falling on his face.

A look at those who don't go to Midnight Mass. Special tips on making rum cake and the ultimate eggnog.
Frosty the Snowman - Due to Frosty's alleged cocaine deals, Frosty the Snowman will not be presented this year. Catch Frosty in the upcoming motion picture The Falcon and Frosty the Snowman, scheduled for release in mid 1987.

9:30 Friday, December 19 on MTV
The Little Drummer Boy, 1986 - The little drummer boy is all grown up now, and playing for Turban Torture, the Mid-East's hottest heavy metal band. This 90-minute concert film (which includes opening act The Rancid Rabbis) features such TT hits as "Christmas in Lebanon," "Guerrilla Games," and "Desert of Eternal Pain." LDB's drumming heightens the performance of lead singer/ bassist Abdula Lazerdeath and guitarist Mohammed "Tex" Bengali.

Alvin Ailey plays Paramount

The Alvin Ailey Repertory Ensemble will be at the Paramount Theatre this Saturday at 8:00.

One of America's most exciting young dance companies, the Alvin Ailey Repertory Ensemble was established in 1974 as a performing company for vital and talented young professionals. It has drawn critical and popular acclaim in both large cities and small towns across the country. Under the Artistic Direction of Sylvia Waters, a former Ailey dancer, the company has committed itself to the development of young dancers and choreographers alike.

The Ensemble has a unique and exciting repertoire of ballets by new, young choreographers as well as works by such famed choregraphers as Donald McKayle, Talley Beatty, and Ailey himself. The result is a company which leaves its

ConnTech looks forward to spring construction

By Derek Gray
Daily Campus Staff

In September, UConn President John Casteen delivered the Keynote address at a national conference about university research parks in Atlanta.

Casteen was invited to speak because of his past experience with high-tech parks in Virginia and his active involvement in development of the proposed $120 million Connecticut Technology Park here.

"Many [college presidents] just sit back and let things sort of go on," said Jeffrey Finkle, director of the National Council for Urban Economic Development, the conference's sponsor, "but he has rolled up his sleeves and made things happen."

Plans for a north campus technology park here began as early as 1981, but not until this year, with the work of Casteen and Michael Helfgott, a lame-duck, Willington State Representative, hired in September, have things really begun to move on the project.

In January, rezoning of 380 acres intended for light industry sites was approved, and, in October, Gov. O'Neill allocated $2 million for an Environmental Research Institute at ConnTech Park and $200,000 for operating expenses of the University of Connecticut Educational Properties, Inc., the non-profit firm which leases the park's land to the developer.

Despite recent delays in construction of the project's initial phase, a 64-unit proposed graduate student housing complex called Celeron Square, directors of the high-tech park are optimistic.

"We're beginning to move ahead," Helfgott, executive director of UCEPI, said. "I sense a lot of things beginning to gel. We're looking forward to the spring [when construction may begin]."

Helfgott gives credit for much of the project's progress to Casteen, whose "academic reputation and credibility" has gained state support and national attention for the park.

"He deserves a lot of the credit for the good things that are happening at the university," Helfgott said. "I've found his leadership very helpful."

Proponents of ConnTech Park believe it will enhance the university's stature as a research institution by attracting top-notch faculty and students. As of 1984, UConn ranked 37th in research and development expenditures of U.S. universities.

"A research park is necessary in today's world for a research university to maintain or enhance its status," Helfgott said.

Opportunities will be created for faculty members who wish to consult for private firms or start their own businesses, Helfgott said. Students, both graduate and undergraduate, can gain research experience for jobs from the industries in the park. And the public "body of knowledge" will be increased, he said.

The high-tech park wil benefit the whole area, as well as UConn, bringing more and better job opportunities and an increased tax base Helfgott said.

"Our park is probably the strongest weapon in the arsenal for economic development in eastern Connecticut, which the state has targeted for an area of growth," he said.

ConnTech Development Co., the project's developer, estimates that the park will generate about 3,500 jobs for the region and $3.2 million in additional taxes to the town of Mansfield. Estimating the town's cost of providing police, fire, and road services at about $1.2 million, the developer estimates a $2 million gain for Mansfield from the park.

The developer was officially hired in May of 1983. Its name was then Sunrise Development Co., a subsidiary of Forest City Enterprises of Cleveland, Ohio. In August of 1985, Sunrise assigned its full interest to ConnTech Development Co.

Connecticut Technology Park is the first high-tech park to be developed by the firm, but it is currently negotiating to develop the proposed 27-acre Maine Research and Development Park near the campus of the University of Maine at Orono.

ConnTech Park is divided into three main areas: housing, industry and office space, and a hotel/conference center.

Housing is planned on a total of 65.6 acres, for single and married graduate students and faculty.

The hotel/conference center is scheduled to comprise 17 meeting rooms, including a main 360-person room, and up to 250 overnight rooms on 18.1 acres. An exercise room, pool, tennis courts and 6,000 to 8,000 square feet of total indoor area is also planned.

"I've seen the plans," Helfgott said, "and I'm confident the hotel/conference center will be a source of pride to the university and the community."

About 199 acres of industrial space is planned to hold about 20 industries, such as biotechnology and material science firms.

A 36-acre agricultural preserve is also designated.

Ron Kysiak, executive director of the research park planned at Northwest University and past director of the 80-acre Science Park in New Haven, said that although parks in the West are bigger, ConnTech Park is "fairly good size for a park in the East."

Kysiak said there are about 160 university research parks in the U.S.

"What they're really becoming is a center of new business development," Kysiak said.

He said that the inner-city Science Park is "probably the largest incubator in the country."

Kysiak said the usual allotment of space at a high-tech park is 75 percent for technology-based industry, 15 percent for residences and 15 percent for offices and institutions.

WHEN IS THE RIGHT TIME TO CALL YOUR BOYFRIEND?

a) When the president of Phi Gamma Delta asks you to Saturday night's Fiji Formal.

b) After raquetball class, to tell him that the instructor with the Australian accent and those blue eyes did wonders for your serve.

c) When you just feel like telling him you miss him after all.

Maybe you shouldn't tell him everything that's going on. But if you still care about him, why not call and whisper some sweet things he'll never forget?

Like why you call using AT&T Long Distance Service, and why you trust AT&T's high quality service and exceptional value.

When you tell him that AT&T gives you immediate credit if you dial a wrong number, he won't be able to get you out of his mind.

And telling him you can count on AT&T for clear, long distance connections will drive him crazy.

All of which will probably inspire him to drive out for the weekend, giving you an excuse to blow off that silly frat party after all.

Howard Finster: A man of vision

By Reese Hersey
Special to the Daily Campus

Howard Finster is kind to cockroaches. Maybe this doesn't surprise you. Anyone with the sensibilities to turn four and one half acres into a garden largely on a framework of castoff 'junk', and call it paradise probably isn't working on a normal value scale. And perhaps, out of a man who barely sleeps because he feels God has laid upon him the task of getting out the messages of sacred art for the last days, cockroaches are no big deal. These theories may be right but I think Howard just likes their quiet, undemanding company.

I hadn't actually thought about cockroaches at all until Howard himself brought them up. Howard and I were standing in the kitchen of the house he uses as a studio and for entertaining the visitors he gets. He was in the middle of a practical joke when I walked in, so he explained it to me. The entire studio-house is covered with paintings, posters, photos, handbills, fliers, and the like. There are even drawings on the ceiling by some of Howard's guests. The only object in the entire house that is off limits is Howards refrigerator, (there is another one out back filled with Diet Coke and chilli for the guests) and to that one Howard was taping a poster that one of his guests had brought. "I'll tell you what," said Howard conspiratorially when I walked in on him, "I found this poster that Tom brought and I'm tapin' it to my frigerator so I can pretend to think he did it and fun him about it. Nothin's sposed to go on my frigerator."

Rev. Howard Finster and friends Reese Hersey graphic

The poster was a large flyer for an art show held in Winston-Salem, N.C. this past summer, featuring Tom and 29 of his friends. Tom himself is Tom Patterson. He is the executive director of the Jargon Society (an esoteric publishing society) and Finster's biographer who is currently hard at work on what will be the book on Howard Finster.

"This is something, ain't it?", said Howard, admiring the damningly hung poster. "He's a real big wig", he said pointing to Tom, "he's a professor and he's writin' the story of my life, not that he can get it all, but I'm not worried-what can they say that's bad? 'Howard Finster is kind to his cockroaches'."

As the afternoon went on, Patterson and some of the other guests came back in from the garden and by and by Howard demanded to know who put the poster on the fridgerator and everyone looked sheepish. Howard eventually laughed and confessed.

...Rev. Finster: Jesus' waterboy

In the last ten years Howard Finster has drawn increasing attention from all sorts of people for his amazingly colored and prolific, sacred art.

Also for being Howard Finster. Both the work and the man are amazing and otherworldly. And both are much more spellbinding in person.

Howard Finster lives and works just outside of Summerville, Georgia. He owns a plot of land the size of of a city block on which he has created both paradise gardens and the Peoples Folk Art Church, Inc.. The garden is a wonderland of cement, junk, foliage, fruit trees and swampland. The church looks like a four story wedding cake. The newest structure is a building that will be a two story museum to house both Howard's works and the pictures and creations other folks send him.

The studio-house where all of the cockroach/refrigerator business took place is actually the hub of Howard's activities, and it is sort of one giantscrap book. Some of the things on the walls would be of note to Howard watchers and people at large. There is a Christmas card from the Reagans tacked to one doorway-it is in thanks for a Christmas ball Howard did for the White House. There are photos of Howard's friends at the Smithsonian Institute above the doorway. And behind the leather couch where Howard catnaps, is a large frame which holds a copy of the Talking Heads' album cover for Little Creatures . There are also the photos, lyrics, and letters David Byrne sent Howard when he asked him to do the cover painting. There is even a copy of the album itself nailed to the wall. This album cover seems to amuse Howard no end.

The original painting is about three feet by three feet. David Byrne sent Howard the band photos and some tapes, and asked him to model the painting after an earlier one Howard had done of himself carrying the weight of the world. The original cost Byrne $5000 to Howard and $1000 to the Phyllis Kind Gallery in New York, Howard's agent. Byrne has been offered upwards of $100,000 for the original. Howard is tickled by this , but even more so by the fact that this one album carried 26 of Howard's verses to over 100,000 people within the first month of sales. "That one album cover reached more people in one month than 40 years of my preachin'",is Howard's explanation for his happiness about that project.

I think Howard takes himself less seriously than a lot of other people do. To himself, he seems to be a 70-something year old man with a sixth grade education, who is known to proffesors, presidents, rock stars, and thousands of people he's never met. All of this because God has shown him how to paint and spread good news. Howard is tickled and tired-he says he knows he will never get his work done in this lifetime, but he works day and night to do what he can. When he's done enough, God will take him.

Howard Finster is, in person, a tired and serious old man who believes his work can help this world. He's sometimes called himself "the last red light of God"-that sounds hell and damnation , last days-are-a-here. To Howard it's not that definite-he is trying to say these could be the last days unless we start doing unto others as we'd have them do unto us. As a race we're not so much doomed as lazy. Howard has spent the past ten years trying beyond the realms of normal strength to show us that if we wake up, we're as strong as we need to be.

Late that same night as the poster on the refrigerator trick, after Tom Patterson and the other visitors had all left (with paintings and books and tapes from Howard), Howard Finster explained himself better than I can. When Howard was just a small child he read the story of Jesus' crucifixion. He said he felt horrible and cried . "I wished I could have brought him some water", Howard said, "then later I read where Jesus said 'As you do unto the little children, so you do unto me.' and I realized I could still give him water by giving water to other people." Late at night, amongst the roaches, alone with the tractor enamel and plywood, we have Howard Finster , Man of Visions and Waterboy.
